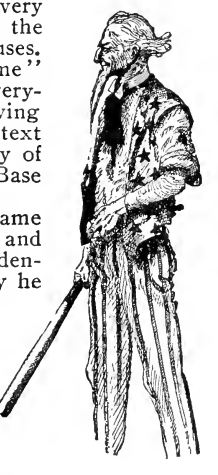
AMERICA'S NATIONAL GAME

By A. G. SPALDING

PRICE, $2.00 NET

A book of 600 pages, profusely illustrated with over 100 full page engravings, and having sixteen forceful cartoons by Homer C. Davenport, the famous American artist



The above work should have a place in every public library in this country, as also in the libraries of public schools and private houses.

The author of "America's National Game" is conceded, always, everywhere, and by everybody, to have the best equipment of any living writer to treat the subject that forms the text of this remarkable volume, viz., the story of the origin, development and evolution of Base Ball, the National Game of our country.

Almost from the very inception of the game until the present time—as player, manager and magnate—Mr. Spalding has been closely identified with its interests. Not infrequently he has been called upon in times of emergency to prevent threatened disaster. But for him the National Game would have been syndicated and controlled by elements whose interests were purely selfish and personal.

The book is a veritable repository of information concerning players, clubs and personalities connected with the game in its early days, and is written in a most interesting style, interspersed with enlivening anecdotes and accounts of events that have not heretofore been published.

The response on the part of the press and the public to Mr. Spalding's efforts to perpetuate the early history of the National Game has been very encouraging and he is in receipt of hundreds of letters and notices, a few of which are here given.

ROBERT ADAMSON, New York, writing from the office of Mayor Gaynor, says:—"Seeing the Giants play is my principal recreation and I am interested in reading everything I can find about the game. I especially enjoy what you [Mr. Spalding] have written, because you stand as the highest living authority on the game."

BARNEY DREYFUSS, owner of the Pittsburg National League club:—"It does honor to author as well as the game. I have enjoyed reading it very much."

WALTER CAMP, well known foot ball expert and athlete, says:—"It is indeed a remarkable work and one that I have read with a great deal of interest."

JOHN B. DAY, formerly President of the New York Nationals:—"Your wonderful work will outlast all of us."

W. IRVING SNYDER, formerly of the house of Peck & Snyder:—"I have read the book from cover to cover with great interest."

ANDREW PECK, formerly of the celebrated firm of Peck & Snyder:—"All base ball fans should read and see how the game was conducted in early years."

MELVILLE E. STONE, New York, General Manager Associated Press:—"I find it full of valuable information and very interesting. I prize it very highly."

GEORGE BARNARD, Chicago:—"Words fail to express my appreciation of the book. It carries me back to the early days of base ball and makes me feel like a young man again."

CHARLES W. MURPHY, President Chicago National League club:—"The book is a very valuable work and will become a part of every base ball library in the country."

JOHN P. MORRILL, Boston, Mass., old time base ball star.—"I did not think it possible for one to become so interested in a book on base ball. I do not find anything in it which I can criticise."

RALPH D. PAINE, popular magazine writer and a leading authority on college sport:—"I have been reading the book with a great deal of interest. 'It fills a long felt want,' and you are a national benefactor for writing it."

GEN. FRED FUNSTON, hero of the Philippine war:—"I read the book with a great deal of pleasure and was much interested in seeing the account of base ball among the Asiatic whalers, which I had written for Harper's Round Table so many years ago."

DEWOLF HOPPER, celebrated operatic artist and comedian:—"Apart from the splendid history of the evolution of the game, it perpetuates the memories of the many men who so gloriously sustained it. It should be read by every lover of the sport."

HUGH NICOL, Director of Athletics, Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.:—"No one that has read this book has appreciated it more than I. Ever since I have been big enough, I have been in professional base ball, and you can imagine how interesting the book is to me."

MRS. BRITTON, owner of the St. Louis Nationals, through her treasurer, H. D. Seekamp, writes:—"Mrs. Britton has been very much interested in the volume and has read with pleasure a number of chapters, gaining valuable information as to the history of the game."

REV. CHARLES H. PARKHURST, D.D., New York:—"Although I am not very much of a 'sport,' I nevertheless believe in sports, and just at the present time in base ball particularly. Perhaps if all the Giants had an opportunity to read the volume before the recent game (with the Athletics) they might not have been so grievously outdone."

BRUCE CARTWRIGHT, son of Alexander J. Cartwright, founder of the Knickerbocker Base Ball Club, the first organization of ball players in existence, writing from his home at Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, says:—"I have read the book with great interest and it is my opinion that no better history of base ball could have been written."

GEORGE W. FROST, San Diego, Calif.:—"You and 'Jim' White, George Wright, Barnes, McVey, O'Rourke, etc., were little gods to us back there in Boston in those days of '74 and '75, and I recall how indignant we were when you 'threw us down' for the Chicago contract The book is splendid. I treasure it greatly."

A. J. REACH, Philadelphia, old time professional expert:—"It certainly is an interesting revelation of the national game from the time, years before it was so dignified, up to the present. Those who have played the game, or taken an interest in it in the past, those at present engaged in it, together with all who are to engage in it, have a rare treat in store."

DR. LUTHER H. GULICK, Russell Sage Foundation:—"Mr. Spalding has been the largest factor in guiding the development of the game and thus deserves to rank with other great men of the country who have contributed to its success. It would have added to the interest of the book if Mr. Spalding could have given us more of his own personal experiences, hopes and ambitions in connection with the game."

The Coach and the Game

During the past year considerable discussion arose among Eastern college base ball authorities regarding the question as to whether the professional coach of a 'varsity team should be permitted to sit on the players' bench during the playing of the more important games of the schedule. The sponsors for the movement to relegate the coach to the grand stand during the play stated that having instructed the student players in the finer points of the game, it was in keeping with the amateur spirit of college base ball to permit them to meet the crucial test and win or lose on their merits without further instruction or advice from the coach. In order to ascertain the opinion of the captains of the leading college teams of the East the Yale Daily News asked for statements on the subject, with the following results:

J. T. Blossom, captain of the Yale University team, wrote:

"I am decidedly in favor of this plan of both teams keeping their coaches from the players' bench, for after the game is over the players will all know that the result of the game was due to their efforts and not to help received during the game from the more experienced professional coach. Not only does this plan put an added responsibility on both the captains and the players, but it will mean that more stress will be put on co-operation and team play. With this in view through the early part of the season, the players will learn to depend on themselves and will develop a greater feeling of self-reliance. In addition, the players will, on their own initiative, have to put into practice what they have learned of inside base ball. Moreover, if this plan is adopted, it will show more clearly just how far advanced college base ball actually is."

Bernard K. Rhoads, captain of the Princeton nine, stated:

"My opinion is that the banishment of the coaches from the bench would make no great difference in the actual playing of the game, provided that the contesting clubs were both without the services of their coaches. Of course, the presence of an experienced coach on one bench would give that team a possible advantage where inside ball was necessary. But when both clubs were without coaches I do not think it would make any difference. A coach has not much chance to do anything during a championship game; his work has been done and the most he can do is to give a sign occasionally or use his experience in a choice of pitchers.

"After all is said and done, it is the nine men on the field and what they do that is going to win or lose the game. The accusation that a college base ball game is merely a battle of wits between the coaches is one of the worst pieces of ignorance I ever heard.

"I do think, however, that the matter should be considered from another point of view—the coach's. He has worked all year as hard, or harder, than anyone for the success of the team, and he is just as anxious to win as any man; then, when the team, which is largely his product, faces the crucial test, he is relegated to the background as a mere spectator. A foot ball coach has access to his men between the halves or indirectly at any time. So it seems to me that the proposed action is somewhat unjust to the coach."

D. J. P. Wingate, captain of the Harvard team, wrote:

"There is no doubt that the coach plays an important part in the games at present, but that part is in actual practice more negative than positive. He takes part in the game more by his steadying influence than by any real part in the playing of the game, although this statement must vary according to the coach considered, and any coach has the opportunity to direct the playing in such a way as to turn the game into victory.

"The theory of the proposed rule is to put more responsibility upon the players themselves, and so to make the games entirely the product of the men on the team. The idea is a good one if it can be practically and fairly worked out. The mere rule that the coach is not allowed on the bench is not sufficient to insure the spirit of the rule against infringement, intentional or non-intentional.

"As to the effect of the rule if it were put into action, I should say that the games would not be as interesting from the same standpoint that they now are, though they might very well be more interesting from a different standpoint, that of the purely undergraduate and amateur idea for college base ball.

"Personally, I am not sure that the change would be for the best. The captain and players have responsibility at present and the influence of the coach is, I believe, for the best under the present system. The addition of further responsibility and direction of the game with no directing eye upon the bench may sound well, and be ethically correct, but I think it is contrary to the practical idea of base ball as a game and unnecessary at present."

Theodore E. Brown, chairman of the base ball committee at the University of Pennsylvania, gives the committee's views, as follows:

"This subject of professional coaching and professional advice to the team during the course of the game is a subject which has been seriously considered for some time. Our base ball committee, consisting of two graduates and three undergraduates, is favorably disposed toward restricting the authority of the professional coach, and I am prepared to say we concur with your views requiring the professional coach to be away from the players' bench during the championship games.

"There is, of course, the other side of it, that the players themselves not being allowed to play Summer base ball, require as much professional coaching, not only during the practice but during the preliminary games, as it is possible to have. The fine points of the game are often not developed in practice and for that reason we would probably approve of having the coach on the bench during the less important games, but to have him off the bench during the championship ones.

"We are fully in accord with the spirit of the movement and hope that it can be successfully worked out among the larger colleges."

Captain R. Nash, of Brown, wrote:

"Brown University most heartily endorses the plan of relegating the professional coach to the grand stand during the championship games. I find that the athletic director, the base ball coach and the athletic board are all in favor of this plan. In addition, I would like to suggest that nobody be allowed on the players' bench during the championship game except the players in uniform and the undergraduate managers and scorers, thus keeping away over-zealous alumni and insuring a purely undergraduate contest."

R. O. Ainslie, captain of the Williams team, stated:

"I am very strong in my belief that steps should be taken toward doing away with professionalism in college base ball, and as a result of many others having the feeling there has been a good deal of agitation on the subject here. The only action that has been taken is this: At a college meeting it was voted that the coach be kept off the players' bench during the games. However, this does not mean that such a step is to be taken. It was a vote merely expressing the sentiment of the college body on the matter. I, as the captain, am anxious, of course, for a successful season and so do not feel that I would care to risk the success of the season by such a step. Yet, I will, and intend to do this, provided several of our leading opponents would do the same. I hope such a scheme can be brought about."

The Amherst captain, J. W. Strahan, replied as follows:

"This question of removing the coach from the bench during the game is merely a step in the direction of the abolition of professional base ball coaches. If we are going to engage a high-priced coach, it would seem very wasteful to me to allow him to absent himself from the base ball field two or three times a week when we are paying him for every day. If we have him let us get all we can out of him, for no team is, as a rule, over-coached. In my base ball experience it has never occurred to me that the coach ever made himself very conspicuous or objectionable during a game. There is no doubt that his presence takes a great deal of responsibility off the captain and keeps up 'pep' and discipline. I do not consider his services on the bench indispensable, but as we have him for the whole season it would seem best to benefit by his supervision all the time. The advantage of not having him on the bench is to make the boys play their own game and think for themselves, but in base ball they have to do this anyway. As long as a coach can stimulate and urge the team, which is about all he actually does, why not let him stay? Those who claim that the coach plays the game and does all the thinking are usually those who know least about the national game in our colleges. In short, let us either have a coach, or not have a coach."

P. W. Loudon, the Dartmouth captain, stated:

"Inasmuch as the proposed plan would seem to promote purer amateurism in college base ball, not to speak of creating more initiative in the individuals of a team themselves, I am heartily in favor of relegating professional coaches from the players' bench during important games."

College Ethics and College Base Ball

At the seventh annual convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association held at New York City during December, 1912, a committee was appointed to consider what measures the association might take to rid college base ball of objectionable features. Professor Louis Bevier of Rutgers College was chosen as chairman of the committee which consisted of Professor Paul C. Phillips, Amherst; Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, University of Pennsylvania and Professor Bevier.

At the eighth annual meeting, held December, 1913, this committee made the following report, which the association adopted without dissension and referred to the executive committee with instructions to take the practical steps necessary to give it effect:

"Your committee's instructions are found in the opening address of President Briggs at the morning session and in his admirable article on 'Amateur and Professional Sportsmanship in Base Ball,' published in Spalding's Official College Base Ball Annual, for 1913, pages 5 and 7.

"Your committee has for the time being nothing to do with the difficult question of eligibility, or with summer base ball in its relation to amateur sport. It is concerned with what is appropriate and desirable in the conduct of the game itself, in order that the manners of officials, players, and spectators may be uniformly those of gentlemen, and that the highest ideals of fairness and sportsmanship shall be maintained, as is so admirably done in intercollegiate tennis.

"We do not think that anything should be recommended which would diminish the virility of the game, or lessen the scope of individual skill, or of clever team work, but we earnestly contend that strategy must not deteriorate into trickery, and that the rules of the game must be observed, not only in letter but in spirit as well.

"To this end your committee recommends:

"First. The strict enforcement of rule 58 (Official Rule Book), which defines the coaching rules at first and third bases, explicitly providing that the 'coacher shall be restricted to coaching the base-runner only, and shall not address remarks except to the base-runner, and then only in words of assistance and direction in running bases. He shall not by words or signs incite or try to incite the spectators to demonstrations, and shall not use language which will in any manner refer to or reflect upon a player of the opposite club, the umpire, or the spectators.'

"Second. The strict enforcement of rule 21, paragraph 1, which explicitly provides that 'under no circumstances shall the umpire permit any person except the players and substitutes in uniform and the manager of the team entitled to its use to be seated on a bench.' This rule places the professional coach or trainer among the spectators, where he should be during the actual progress of the game, and places the responsibility for the conduct of the play in the hands of the amateur players themselves.

"Third. The strict enforcement by the umpire of the rules forbidding 'blocking a runner,' 'prying a runner off the base' and the like, as unfair practice; and we appeal to student public opinion to condemn such trickery, making it impossible even should it elude the vigilance of the umpire. Such sharp practice is explicitly prohibited by the rules and an attempt surreptitiously to transgress them is as unsportsmanlike as it would be for a tennis player, hoping to escape detection, to deliver his service from an unlawful position.

"We recommend further that, in pursuance of the spirit of the rules, Boards of Athletic Control, and Faculties of Colleges and Universities, banded together to promote a healthy growth and a wise control of student athletics adopt and enforce the following specific regulations:

"First. The catcher shall not, during actual play, speak at all to the batsman, except where occasion requires a bona fide word of caution, and in speaking to the pitcher he shall not use words reflecting or calculated to reflect upon the batsman or any member of the opposing team.

"Second. No member of either team shall call or shout during the game to any member of the opposing team except to caution him against some danger, nor behave in any indecorous or unseemly manner.

"Third. There shall be no oral coaching from the bench.

"Fourth. The so-called 'encouragement of the pitcher,' from the outfield, shall be stopped, or at least minimized, since we believe that such shouting of remarks in endless iteration is not only disagreeable to the spectators, but is disconcerting rather than helpful to the pitcher. In general it amounts merely to senseless noise, and is quite unworthy of college bred men. Whatever 'encouragement' or 'support' the pitcher may need, can be quietly given from the infield.

"Fifth. That the umpire shall warn any player offending any of these rules, and on a second offense exclude him from the game.

"Sixth. That in general the attention of students be called to the importance of courtesy on the part of the home institution to the visiting team, a courtesy which will forbid such cheering, singing, or chatter as are designed at critical moments to 'rattle' the visiting team.

"A base ball game is a splendid contest of skill between two opposing nines, before an academic throng of spectators; it is not a contest between a visiting team and a local team assisted by a disorderly rabble. It is delightful when, as often happens, a fine play by the visiting team is as heartily applauded as a similar play by the home team.

"To the end that these principles, if endorsed by this association, be a real force and not a mere brutum fulmen, we recommend that, if adopted, this report be printed in separate form, and copies be sent by the Secretary to the Presidents, the Deans, the Athletic Directors or similar officers, the Chairmen of Faculty Committees on athletic sports, and to the editors of undergraduate publications of all colleges and universities in the United States, with a formal request for action thereon and a report of such action to the Secretary of the Association."

How to Train for College Base Ball

By Ray L. Fisher,
Physical Director Middlebury College, and Member of New York Americans' Pitching Staff.

Before taking up the discussion of the various positions, I will state the best means of remaining in condition for base ball during the winter months. By keeping the wind good and the weight down and overcoming some of the worst faults of young ball players, such as failure to start quickly on slow hit balls and bunts, lack of ability to throw without stopping and straightening up, and uncertainty in getting the "break" on the pitcher while running bases, the college player will find that he has improved greatly during the off season.

Hand ball is probably the best of indoor sports for all-around good; it makes the eye accurate and teaches one to start and stop quickly. Next to hand ball is basket ball, which I would put first if it were not for the element of danger that is involved in it. Young ball players should not do much heavy gymnastic work, as it tends to harden the muscles, which is undesirable in base ball.

First base is one of the hardest places to play properly, yet, when played by a man with ability and proper training, it looks, and is, the easiest position of the diamond. In training to play first base, one must learn to handle all kinds of thrown balls. This can be done by constant practice on poorly delivered throws. Attention should be given to the problem of when a player should step back and when forward to receive bounces, always holding the toe on the bag. On throws, where the decision is likely to be close, the first baseman should reach forward as far as he is able, in order to gain all the time that is possible. It is very necessary that care should be taken in shifting feet. If the ball is thrown from third base or shortstop in front of the runner, the first baseman should step across and receive the ball on the outside of the bag, holding the right toe on the outside corner and allowing the base runner the inside of the bag.

When first base is unoccupied, the baseman should play away from the foul line to the extent of the ground he can cover, and as far back as he can, and still be able to beat the runner to the base with time to take position to receive the throw. In playing the base while occupied, the baseman should play about six inches in front, but he must know exactly the position of the bag by constantly touching it with his heel. In this way the baseman can tag the runner easily without danger of being spiked and can also start quickly out from the bag with the pitch. In case second base is occupied, as well as first, the baseman should play about ten feet back of the base runner, unless there is no one out, in which case the baseman must come in for the bunt and the bag must be covered by the second baseman.

Second base and shortstop have many requirements in common, foremost of which is the ability to get the jump with the ball. One may become efficient in this by combining a study of the position at bat taken by an opposing player, with knowledge of the kind of ball the pitcher is delivering. After one does this for some time he will be able to cover much more ground. In playing second base, one should know whether he is able to cover more ground to the right or left and play accordingly. One great fault of basemen is the inability to tag runners. To tag a runner the ball should be held in front of the bag close to the ground, in the gloved hand, so as to allow the runner to slide into it. In this way the danger of being injured or of losing the man is avoided. A second baseman must also be able to handle the ball fast on double plays. The ball need not be thrown hard, but it must be handled quickly. In playing a ground ball to a shortstop for a double play, the second baseman should set himself for the throw as he stoops for the ball and should deliver it to the shortstop at least waist high, as it is very difficult to handle a low thrown ball while on the run.

A shortstop needs the strongest arm in the infield, as he has more long and hurried throws than any other man. He must be able to throw while on the run and without straightening up. Practice is the only way to acquire this ability. One should begin covering as much ground as possible while taking time for accurate throwing and then should gradually quicken the throw while retaining former accuracy. The shortstop must be good at tagging runners and receiving throws. He should play as deeply as he is able and learn to come in fast on slow hit balls.

Third base is a very difficult place to play, because of the inability of most men to get in fast on bunts. This baseman must also be able to throw on the run and without straightening up. He must judge bounces very quickly. He should take all the slow hit balls that he can reach, so as to allow the shortstop to play back. All infield men should know every ball the pitcher throws and shift accordingly.

In the outfield, one great asset is ability to go back after fly balls. This can be acquired by playing well up in practice and going back on every ball. In a short time one will be able to judge the ball at a glance, and by playing farther in fielders can hold men to one base on drives through the infield. Outfielders should give a great deal of attention to throwing. The ball should be returned to the catcher or baseman on the first bounce. In the latter part of practice, the outfielder should try a few such throws each day, being sure to get in position to throw before catching the ball, so as to get it away quickly. Outfielders should always know what is being pitched and shift with it.

The position of catcher is one of the most important on the team. A good catcher can turn many close games into victories. In training for a catcher, one should first become able to handle low and high balls, and then should turn his attention to the studying of batters and base runners. It is impossible to tell how to judge batters and base runners, but after giving the matter close study for some time, one can invariably tell whether a batter is a low or high ball hitter and in many instances can "call the turn" on a runner. I prefer a man with this knowledge to one with a strong arm, as it does not require a swift throw to beat the runner when the catcher has "called the turn," and consequently has a "pitch out" to handle. Another important qualification for a catcher is the ability to tag runners. Many college catchers are deficient in this. In waiting to receive a throw, the catcher should stand across the plate and, as the ball is received, place it in front and close to the ground, thus tagging the foot with which the runner hooks the plate in his slide.

Pitchers are usually divided into three classes: those using the fast ball, the curve ball, or the spit ball. Most every exceptional college pitcher depends on one of these balls. There are very few who have both a good curve and a fast ball. A pitcher who has both should rely on the more effective one and waste the other. The spit ball pitcher generally has little else. When conditions are favorable he is practically unbeatable; but when the conditions are adverse, such as wet grounds, skinned diamond, or strong wind blowing with the pitcher, he is almost useless.

Much attention should be given to fielding and covering first base on all balls hit to the left of the pitcher; also to backing up the catcher on balls thrown in from the outfield. A young pitcher should always keep in mind where the base-runners are and constantly keep his eye on them. This may be accomplished by first looking and then keeping watch. After practicing this for some time a pitcher will be able to hold the runner close to the bag. Pitchers should always work with the catcher in studying hitters and in this way become accustomed to judging batsmen. In all instances the pitcher should know just how the balls and strikes stand on the batter and pitch accordingly.

"Summer Base Ball," Past and Present

By Parke H. Davis.
Member of Intercollegiate Foot Ball Rules Committee,
Ex-President Princeton University Athletic Association.

The most important issue at present debated by college conferences and conventions is "summer base ball." What is it? When the phrase first was coined, twenty-five years ago, it meant the playing of base ball in summer vacation by college athletes who received therefor their expenses only, without the loss of their amateur standing. In the revival of the controversy, boldly and broadly, it returns with a wider meaning. It now is the proposition to permit college athletes to play base ball in the summer time for a salary and be eligible subsequently, notwithstanding, to membership upon the conpetitive teams of their college.

The advocates of the proposition assert that under the present prohibition against "summer base ball" many poor, worthy students are deprived of a legitimate means of earning money in vacation with which to support themselves in term time. They further contend that intercollegiate sports, as now regulated, are for the sons of rich men or for such poor fellows as will make the great sacrifices that strict amateurism requires. The supporters of "summer base ball" further claim that the present rules against it do not prevent it, but that they are conducive of falsehood and deceit because widely and stealthily evaded.

The vitality of this controversy unquestionably is due to the plausibility of these arguments and to the great prestige of some of those who advance them. What, now, is the specific objection to "summer base ball"? Its opponents allege that the inevitable consequence of permitting college athletes to engage in "summer base ball" will be the professionalizing of intercollegiate athletics. If the collegian is to be permitted to enter base ball for pay the paid base ball man in turn will enter college for sport. This would lead instantly to a magnification of the part of base ball in a college's establishment and an intolerable disturbance of the relation of sport to the main function of a college education. Intercollegiate sports, it must be remembered, are merely incidents in the social life of college bodies, which cannot be permitted to distract beyond a certain point the serious work of the college.

The testimony of experience is strongly against the practicability of "summer base ball." In the early days of the diamond, the decade of the '70s Eastern college stars were in great demand by the professional teams, for in that period the college nines, particularly Harvard, Princeton and Yale, were superior to the city nines. For a time there was no objection to the collegians playing with the professionals during the summer vacation, although the former openly were paid for their services. In the spring of 1879, however, two famous college players from the same institution, who after graduation were playing with a great city nine, suddenly left the professional team, re-entered college and by their presence lifted their college nine from the rear to the front in the intercollegiate campaign.

This spectacular occurrence naturally centered attention upon the subject of professionalism. As a result of the agitation which followed, six colleges, namely, Amherst, Brown, Dartmouth, Harvard, Princeton and Yale, met in the old Massasoit House at Springfield Mass., December 6, 1879, for the purpose of drafting a common eligibility rule and if possible to form a base ball league. Their deliberations eventually produced both. The rule adopted on that occasion ran as follows:

"Any student who has been in regular attendance for the whole of any college year in any department shall be eligible in that year for the nine. Any student who after this date shall play upon a professional team or who shall play for money shall not be eligible."

This pioneer rule struck directly at the grievances as they existed in the simple days of 1879, but a period was on the horizon in which simplicity in sport was to develop rapidly into complexity. With the decade of the '80s came the organized amateur athletic club nine, the summer resort nine, the manufactory nine, and the small city amateur nine, some of which were so managed that the public unconsciously but accurately styled them as "semi-amateur" nines. These organizations, likewise, chiefly sought the college stars. Again no objection was raised at first to the collegian playing with these teams, provided he received only his expenses. It was not long, however, before rumors were rife of padded expense accounts, of highly valuable gifts, of high salaried commercial positions in which no service was required. Not only were the collegians embroiled in charges and counter-charges, but the partisans of these summer teams likewise joined the hue and cry. The divided allegiance of some of the latter led them to furnish secretly to their college, proofs of the professionalism of rival collegians. Curiously, it was foot ball that suffered most from the ensuing storm, due to the double fact that the foot ball season followed base ball, and that the star of the diamond usually was a star of the gridiron. Thus the fall of 1889 found the old American Intercollegiate Foot Ball Association, which had founded and nurtured the intercollegiate game, locked in a bitter row over charges of professionalism which had originated in "summer base ball," a row that eventually wrecked the association. This was followed by similar controversies among the various institutions forming "dual leagues" in athletics, and the breaking of intercollegiate relations made a great din during the early years of the decade of the '90s. The bitterness of the rival student bodies extended to the alumni and to the faculties. Thus the condition became intolerable.

Up to this time college faculties had regarded competitive athletics as exclusively a matter of student management. They now perceived, however, that the institution had reached a stage of evolution when it was as much a matter of faculty supervision as any department of instruction or business administration. With the adoption of this theory on the subject reform began. The first blow struck prohibited collegians who competed in any branch of sport with an organized athletic club from representing their college upon any competitive team. The object of this rule was the bitter rivalries and costly prizes of the great athletic clubs of Boston, New York and Philadelphia. The collegians of the period loudly denounced the action of their faculties, but in three years a new college generation accepted the regulation as one of the commonplace rules of sport.

The second shot for reform came from the undergraduates themselves. In the early spring of 1892 Princeton and Yale introduced into an intercollegiate convention at New York the famous "undergraduate rule," which limited to undergraduates membership upon the competitive teams. This commonplace proposition of to-day provoked at that time a rebellion which shattered to fragments all that remained of the old foot ball association, and kept the college world in a turmoil for several years before its universal adoption was accomplished. This issue for a time drew attention away from the subject of "summer base ball," which in the interim thrived prodigiously, especially at summer resorts and small cities. Another crop of scandals appearing about 1895, the faculties again awoke to action. At this point their remedies became various. Some forbade their athletes to play in any game for which an admission fee was charged. Some prohibited their athletes from playing except upon a complete amateur nine at their own home. Others permitted their athletes to play with various amateur nines whose membership and methods met the approval of the faculty committee on athletics. On the whole, these various regulations during the past fifteen years have brought substantial peace, especially to those colleges which assume the exclusive right to administer their own eligibility rules. Institutions which are parties to dual and conference agreements, and therefore subject to protests from rivals, have fared almost as well, as in the majority of instances each conference college reserves the right to decide a protest directed against one of its own men. It is true, that now and then some sporadic, flagitious incident of professionalism has occurred to remind us that the problem has not been wholly solved and, as it seems, to encourage the advocates of "summer base ball" to challenge the equity of the entire system.

The logic of the controversy, however, is equally potent with the testimony of experience against the proposition of "summer base ball." The contention of its advocates that many poor, worthy students are now deprived of a legitimate means of earning money in vacation with which to support themselves in term time falls before an actual investigation. Inquiry at the various colleges finds that only two men upon the average 'Varsity base ball squad are of necessity self-supporting, although on some squads as high as four men have been found. These men are college favorites. To them is reserved the first choice of the various summer occupations which college authorities, undergraduates and alumni can assemble and offer. In such an abundance of opportunities, equally remunerative with "summer base ball," the collegian who prefers the diamond does so, not of necessity, but because he desires to work playing ball. Is it not then unreasonable to ask that an entire college body shall be exposed to the inevitable turmoil of "summer base ball" to provide jobs for two, three and four men, in a special occupation, when many others equally are available? "But," say the champions of "summer base ball," "track athletes are permitted to receive costly prizes, medals of gold studded with diamonds, valuable watches, vases, statues, and other objects of great price." This undeniably is true, but the effect of the citation is to call attention to the fact that track sports are far behind other branches in the need for a thorough-going reform.

The winner of the real Olympic Games 2,000 years ago was satisfied with a wreath. The argument that the prohibition against "summer base ball" is conducive to falsehood and deceit, because it is evaded, is our old friend, the argument of the anarchist and the nihilist, that laws should be abolished to prevent the evils from their breakage.

The real problem in "summer base ball" is how to complete the rules already devised for its eradication? Two subsidiary problems remain for solution, the playing for pay by a youth before matriculation in college, and the playing by a collegian in the summer time, without pay or expenses, upon an amateur but organized team.

The first condition may be met by requiring each candidate for a position upon a competitive college team to file with the authorities a statement that upon his honor he is eligible for membership upon the college's representative teams under the eligibility rules of the college. In every well ordered athletic establishment in the colleges of the country every candidate for a team each year is required to file with the authorities the written consent of his parents or guardian to his participation in competitive sports, and he is further required to supplement this by a certificate from a physician that he is physically fit therefor. Now, let the authorities take one step more. Let them require of each candidate for a competitive team the following personal certificate:

"I certify upon my honor that I have never directly or indirectly participated in any branch of sport for pay; that I have never received any valuable thing in lieu of money except medals and prizes regularly offered, and that I have never participated in any branch of sport under an assumed name."

The penalty for falsely signing such a certificate should be expulsion. Some will say that such a penalty is too severe. The answer to this is that the honor of representing a college upon a competitive team is large and that the obligation imposed should not be less. That fine old maxim "noblesse oblige" states the condition in two words. As soon as it is generally known that such a statement confronts every athlete upon his entrance into college, the youths in the preparatory schools will look upon the requirement as upon any other incidental in their preparation.

The rule for athletes after matriculation should be not less direct. A salutary one is that which prescribes:

"No student shall be eligible for membership upon any competitive team who, after matriculation, participates in any sport at which an admission fee is charged, except as a member of one of the college's competitive teams, or who receives directly or indirectly any compensation, remuneration, reimbursement, or payment of his expenses for participating in any sport at which an admission fee is not charged."

This is a strong rule, but it is made in behalf of a great object, the orderly conduct of competitive college sport. Intercollegiate athletics have great honors to bestow in the short period of four years, and they demand in return the exclusive service of the recipient for only three summers. It is little enough.

Yale's Remarkable Run of Seventeen Consecutive Victories in 1913

The remarkable record of the Yale University team of 1913, which included a run of seventeen consecutive victories, attracted much attention in the ranks of both amateur and professional base ball. During the three months between March 21 and June 21 the team played thirty-four games, of which twenty-eight were won and six lost. Considered purely from a college standpoint, the Yale record was even more impressive, for of the twenty-nine games played against college nines Yale won twenty-five. Five games were played against professional teams, of which three were won from the New Haven club of the Eastern Association and two lost to the New York National League club.

It was the seventeen straight victories, however, that brought the Yale nine into national prominence and led to the statement that these consecutive wins established a world's record in college base ball. Investigation, however, proved that the Harvard team of 1885 won nineteen games straight and the Princeton nine of 1897 also won seventeen games in a row. So much comment followed the long run of Yale victories during 1913 that special efforts were made to secure the list of similar winning records. The result of this investigation is shown in the following tabulation:

"Summer Base Ball" and its Relation to the College Game

An Address Delivered Before the National Collegiate Athletic Association by Professor C. V. P. Young, of Cornell University.

The question whether college students shall be allowed to play ball for money during the summer months and still retain their amateur standing, seems to be ever recurrent. It apparently will not down. Articles have been written against it, resolutions passed condemning it, rules formulated which, it was fondly imagined, would absolutely prevent it, but we still hear on all sides that "summer base ball" is being played, and that the net result of opposition to it to date has been a widespread development of lying and hypocrisy. How much truth there is in this charge, I am not prepared to say, although, of course, like all generalizations, it smacks of exaggeration.

The action of many college faculties, however, in rescinding their rules against "summer base ball," and thereby attempting to distinguish between this and other forms of "professionalism," is significant. The attitude of these well meaning bodies, and the arguments cited in support of their action, have led to considerable confusion of thought in the minds of many of those who have heretofore strongly opposed it, and have raised a doubt, apparently, whether, after all, it was advisable to continue the fight in view of the unsatisfactory results that have thus far undoubtedly attended their efforts.

While formerly one of those who argued in favor of a mild form of "professionalism" in base ball, I have come to the conclusion that such action, if generally adopted, would be a serious, if not fatal, blow, not only to base ball, but to other forms of intercollegiate sport. In the first place, I don't believe it is possible to distinguish between the several branches of athletics, to pick out base ball and say that in this branch one standard or set of rules shall prevail, while in other branches greater restrictions shall be maintained. What is the difference, in the code of the "summer base ball" supporters, between playing base ball for money, and entering a track meet (supposing the athlete to be proficient as a runner rather than as a ball player) for a cash prize, or for a share of the gate receipts? The track athlete, or foot ball player or wrestler, or swimmer, may be just as much in need of financial assistance to defray the expenses of his education as the base ball player. It is true that the base ball player has a wider opportunity, and that for him there is less chance of detection, if the rule is evaded, but that hardly affects the ethics of the question, nor would the justice of a discrimination based upon such an argument appeal to the athlete who did not happen to be a ball player.

Moreover, if the athlete earns money by playing ball, but is still eligible to play on his college nine, it would hardly be consistent to bar him from the foot ball eleven, or the track team, or the crew. If he is allowed to represent his institution in other branches in which he has not competed for money, then it would mean in effect that any athlete could compete in any branch provided only that he had not used that particular branch as a means of earning money, and notwithstanding the fact that he may have been earning money all his life, in any one of a dozen of other athletic ways.

I admit that a student is not necessarily a "professional athlete" in a strict and literal sense, when he receives money for some slight athletic service or participation, any more than he is a professional waiter or book agent when he used those agencies as a means of gaining an education; but, in the present state of intercollegiate competition, with rivalry as keen as it is, it becomes an absolute impossibility to introduce degrees of "professionalism," or to permit a "mild" form in one branch and prohibit it in another. If the bars are to be lowered in one branch the only practicable, as well as the only logical and consistent course, is to lower them in all branches.

Theoretically, it is true, the end and aim of intercollegiate athletics is to stimulate athletic exercise on the part of all the students, and participation in them should be entirely incidental to scholastic work, and carried on only with a view to the improvement of health and efficiency. If all educational institutions were on the same footing and maintained the same standards, the logical solution of this whole question perhaps, might be to place eligibility to all athletic teams on the basis of scholarship, with a one year's residence rule (to prevent proselyting) and a three years' limit. The solution of the difficulty is not so simple, however, and no one familiar with present conditions, or with the nature of the American youth, or even with college faculties, can advocate the adoption of such a plan; but we must do either the one thing or the other—either keep our athletics entirely free from the money taint, or lower the bars in all branches alike.

Assuming, however, that the attempt were made to pursue a middle course, and "summer base ball" playing were permitted generally, as it now is by a few of the colleges, and such players as received money were barred from other teams, what would happen? The effect upon intercollegiate base ball, I believe, would be demoralizing. It would not only place the game upon an entirely different footing from other college sports, but the games themselves would lose a large part of their interest and attraction for spectators and players (at least those of the players who participate merely for purposes of sport and recreation).

The chief zest of intercollegiate sport, as at present carried on, is owing to the fact that competitors meet upon a basis of equality. Once permit this form of professionalism, and we would have college players not only on hotel teams and at summer resorts, imported and hired as an advertising measure, but we would find them on all the minor semi-professional leagues scattered throughout the country. It would mean, therefore, that the intercollegiate supremacy in base ball would actually depend upon the amount of experience players could get by making a business of the game throughout the summer months. A team made up of amateurs could hardly hope to compete with a team made up not only of players who have gained experience in such wise, but who in some cases, and as has happened in the past, have been playing together all summer as a team under the name of the hotel or resort they were advertising.

The question to my mind is not as to whether "summer base ball" is a more or less legitimate form of earning money than waiting on table or selling books (the analogy is hardly an accurate one unless we carry it further, and place the student waiter or book seller in some sort of a competition with the man who uses those agencies as a permanent means of livelihood), but rather that the ball player, by accepting compensation for his participation, places himself in a different category from the player to whom appeal has been made entirely from the standpoint of sport.

If the athlete needs the money to defray expenses, and feels justified in doing so, let him earn money by playing ball or in other athletic ways, but he cannot fairly ask, nor should he be permitted in the interests of sport, to compete on a basis of equality, or for athletic supremacy, with those who have maintained their amateur status. Just as soon as the wall of separation between the professional and the amateur is broken down in base ball or any other sport, just so soon will that sport cease to stimulate interest or to merit any particular attention on the part of students and public (and evidences are already forthcoming to prove the force of the statement) and it is in a fair way to be abolished as a form of intercollegiate competition.

The remedy for the present unsatisfactory state of affairs, it seems to me, lies in the hands of the National Collegiate Association. Here we have an organization made up of nearly every institution of note in the country, so that any action which it may take, while not binding upon its members, will, through its moral effect, go a long way toward accomplishing the end desired. This may not be the time to take drastic action, and since the evil has been more or less condoned by undergraduate opinion, it can hardly be expected that action of any kind will at once result in its being blotted out. But let the association call attention to the principle involved and to the absolute necessity of maintaining the same standards in base ball as prevail in other branches of intercollegiate sport. Let it appoint a base ball committee which will get a positive statement from each of the institutions represented in its body as to the position of that institution on the "summer base ball" question, and publish that list, classifying the colleges perhaps as A, B, C. Then when an institution belonging to class A, which stands for a rigid adherence to amateur principles, plays an institution in another class, the conditions of competition are known to everybody, and the result judged accordingly. In determining the final rating of the various teams, of course, only those colleges would be considered for the intercollegiate championship which compete on a strictly amateur basis, their games with the summer hotel and semi-professional players being in the nature of practice games, the same as games with out-and-out professional teams. It seems to me that that is the first step and will, if carried out, educate public opinion to a fair judgment of the issue involved, and to a support of their position.

Unless the rule against "summer base ball" is to become a dead letter, a positive stand must be taken, and I believe that can only be done effectively when all the institutions that stand for the perpetration of intercollegiate sport on an amateur basis get together and compel the institutions that compete on a professional, or semi-professional, or semi-semi-professional basis, to stand up and be counted, and to accept a rating in the class to which they belong.

No one who has given the matter serious consideration will attempt to maintain that intercollegiate athletics as they are at present developed, can be perpetuated on any other than an amateur basis, and it is just because the colleges and universities that are attempting to enforce eligibility rules make no distinction as to whom they will compete with, that the public likewise makes no distinction, and violations and irregularities are condoned.

One institution acting by itself cannot enforce its own rules effectively, nor can it bring effective pressure to bear upon other institutions, but a number of institutions acting together, and with public opinion back of them, can accomplish a great deal, and, to my mind, there is absolutely no reason why this association should not take hold of the base ball situation and clean it up and put it on an amateur basis, just as track athletics have been cleaned up within the last ten years and are maintained on an absolutely amateur basis.

CHINESE UNIVERSITY OF HAWAII TEAM.

Chinese College Players' Tour of the United States

One of the striking features of the 1913 college base ball season was the number of international games played on home and foreign diamonds. The Chinese University of Hawaii team toured the United States, while both the University of Washington and Leland Stanford University sent nines to Japan. So far as actual scores are concerned the Chinese team far outdid the American invaders of the Orient. During its extended campaign in this country close to one hundred games were played and the Hawaii nine won a big majority of the contests scheduled. Notwithstanding the fact that the team was on the road continuously and seldom played two games on the same diamond, the Chinese did not find it difficult to hold their own against the best of the college and minor professional teams.

In fielding, base running and all-around work, the team showed itself to be up to the standard of the best university combinations of this country. The batting of the visitors was not so heavy as that of some of their leading opponents, for almost all of the Hawaiian stickmen used a short, choppy action which seldom brought the long base hits that the freer method of hitting brings forth when the ball is met squarely. On the other hand, the snappy hitting of the Chinese gave them many singles, and once the various players secured a foothold at first base their speed and hit and run play kept the opposing infield on the jump until the third man was out in every inning. Runs were scored by daring base stealing and sharp hits with great frequency.

The average college team found this system of play hard to combat successfully, as is shown by the fact that of the fifty-nine games played against the college and university teams of the Pacific Coast, Middle West and East the Chinese players won fifty-four and lost but five. The scores of all the games against the college teams of the United States follow:

All-Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association Base Ball Team

By V. H. Friedman,
Graduate Manager Athletics, University of Alabama.

In selecting an All-Southern college base ball team confined to those colleges holding membership in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association, the players composing the teams of the Universities of Alabama and Georgia stand out as furnishing the major portion of the material. This is due to the excellent record made by the two teams during the 1913 season. Alabama lost but three games out of the twenty-three scheduled by the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association. Georgia, her nearest rival, lost but five. Alabama won the Association championship, but only after a hard struggle. The title was in doubt in the final games of the season. Georgia was eliminated when the team suffered defeat by Georgia Institute of Technology, which, in turn, had been defeated by Alabama. Both college nines lost but one series in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association play.

As is always the case, individual players of merit stood out regardless of the team upon which they played and as a result gained places on the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association team, but the showing and all-around strength of the first and second teams in the Association race was such that a majority of the positions naturally were allotted to the members of these nines. The selection, therefore, is as follows:

McDowell.....Left Field.....(Captain) Alabama
Critz .....First Base.....Mississippi A. and M.
Hutchinson.....Second Base.....Georgia
Joplin .....Shortstop.....Alabama
McGee.....Third Base....Mississippi A. and M.
Montague .....Center Field.....Georgia Tech.
Ginn .....Right Field.....Georgia
Wells .....Catcher.....Alabama
Eubanks .....Pitcher.....Georgia Tech.
Corley .....Pitcher.....Georgia

HON. CABOT WARD,

President of the Park Board of New York City and Commissioner of Parks, Boroughs of Manhattan and Richmond,

Hon. Cabot Ward, President of the Park Board of New York City and Commissioner of Parks, Boroughs of Manhattan and Richmond, was born in New York City on March 17, 1876. He was educated in the public schools, graduated from Harvard University in 1893 with the degree of A. B., subsequently graduated from the Harvard Law School, and was admitted to the New York Bar in 1902. Commissioner Ward's first public appointment was as Auditor General of Porto Rico in 1905. He was afterward elected a member of the upper house of the Porto Rico Legislature. President Taft appointed Mr. Ward Secretary of State of Porto Rico during 1908, and he was subsequently elected President of the Senate of Porto Rico. He became chairman of the Public Service Commission of Porto Rico, was a member of the board of trustees of the University of Porto Rico, and became acting Governor of Porto Rico in 1909. He was a Delegate to the fourth Pan-American Congress, held in Buenos Aires in 1910, and as such took part in the preparation and ratification of international arbitration treaties, patent and trade mark laws, international sanitary agreements, etc. In 1911 he was appointed a member of the United States Commission to Chile. He was appointed on January 1, 1914, as President of the Park Board of New York City and Commissioner of Parks for the Boroughs of Manhattan and Richmond by the Hon. John Purroy Mitchel, Mayor.

Base Ball Notes

Beloit (Wis.) College.—This team had a fairly successful season in 1913, winning the State college title of Wisconsin, and finishing second in the "Little Five." The work of the two pitchers, Fucik and Williams, was particularly commendable.

Alcorn (Miss.) College.—The team played fifteen games last season, winning nine and losing six. A majority of the victories was due to the pitching of U. S. Vincent. The leading batters were P. H. Lightfoot, Leon Gladden and James Powell. In base running Woodie Barrett, George W. Lee, U. S. Vincent and George W. Cox excelled. Lightfoot made the most home runs, R. Attyberry and Lightfoot led in three-base hits, and G. W. Cox, James Powell and Thomas W. Malone in two-base hits.

Bates College, Lewiston, Me.—Although Bates' team was handicapped at the beginning of the season, the captain having broken his leg and the pitcher was spiked in the hand, it played good ball throughout the campaign. Coady, captain-elect, excelled in base running, and Talbot's heavy batting was a feature. In the State championship game with Bowdoin, Talbot won the game in the ninth inning by hitting a three-bagger, with two men out. The fielding of Ridlow, Cobb and Marston deserve especial mention, also Talbot, Joyce and Bates, the outfielders. Anderson was the mainstay in the pitcher's box, although Lindquist and Miller did good work when called upon.

Albright College, Myerstown, Pa.—Albright College had its most successful season in Base Ball in 1913. It not only had the remarkable record of winning seventeen games out of twenty-one played, but defeated several strong teams, notably, Swarthmore, Susquehanna, Bucknell, Lafayette and Ursinus, and also forced Lehigh and Penn State to play ten innings before they won. Albright was one of the very few college teams which were able to win from the strong Chinese team of the University of Hawaii. Among those that starred at the bat were Greenhalgh, Benfer, Pownall, Potteiger, Hartzler, Yost, Lutz and Beamenderfer. The team had two star pitchers in Light and Schiefley, and it was their air-tight tossing which, to a great extent, accounts for Albright's remarkable record among Eastern colleges.

Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill.—The season of 1913, although very short, was successful. The last game was played on May 24. Five men on the team deserve mention, namely, C. E. Anderson, catcher; N. Hultgren, pitcher; K. Erickson, first base; F. J. Sten, second base, and W. Swedberg, left field. These men play a good, fast game in their positions, and are all good hitters. They are always in the game. At the beginning of the season it looked as though the team would not have a pitcher, having no material at all, but N. Hultgren had exceptional speed, and he turned out a winner. The other four players, although it being their first year on the team, played well. They were: W. Peterson, third base; R. Polson, shortstop; R. Hultgren, center field, and A. Molander, right field. All these players are back for another year, except one, and the college expects a successful season in 1914.

Amherst (Mass.) College.—The team started the season with no experienced pitchers and only one who showed signs of 'varsity material—though very green, and also two green men in the infield. Captain Partenheimer and Coach Davis gradually built up an excellent team. The season was a decided success, except for a period of two weeks while the whole first and second string battery was laid up with injuries. In this crippled condition Amherst played Harvard, Yale and Tufts. When the batteries returned the team won seven out of the last eight games, including Princeton, Dartmouth, and two games with Williams. Captain Partenheimer at third base was a tower of strength. Goodridge, a freshman, at first base, put up a wonderful game. Swasey in center field and Robinson in the box did well, and Strahan behind the bat showed himself a fine player. He participated in only one losing game during the season.

Amity College, College Springs, Iowa.—The team representing Amity College in 1913 played thirty-nine games, of which it won twenty-six. During the college season nine games were played, four being victories. Twenty-one games were played on a trip through Nebraska, of which the "Iowa Kids," the name under which the team went through that State, annexed sixteen. In a series of games with Blanchard, the Amity team won three out of five, and took three out of four from Elmo.

Carthage (Ill.) College.—Coach J. Arthur Baird has this to say about the 1913 team: "Carthage College had the best Base Ball team in its history. Captain O'Haver's pitching was a puzzle to nearly all comers. It is believed that the young catcher, Simmons, is a coming leaguer. Botkins in left field caught everything in sight. The Carlin brothers held down first and second bases in veteran style. The freshman pitcher, Reidner, made an excellent record. The team was an excellent hitting one and could generally be relied on to bat out a victory in a pinch."

Baylor University, Waco, Tex.—The Baylor team was not up to the standard of the three former seasons, several of the best players being declared ineligible on account of the strict intercollegiate rules. Twenty-two games were played, but only nine were victories. The players were: O. C. Emery, J. N. Mendenhall, catchers; F. C. McConnel, Knox Henery, W. O. Brady, J. K. Robertson, pitchers; Andrew Belew, first base; C. M. Story, second base; J. B. McLain, third base; P. D. Collier, shortstop; Dewitt Franklow, left field; I. E. Smith, center field; Pat Morris, right field.

Carson-Newman College, Jefferson City, Tenn.—The team, as a whole, played good ball, winning sixteen out of twenty-one games under the excellent coaching of "Humphy" McElveen, a former Brooklyn club star. Carson-Newman claims the college championship of East Tennessee. Excellent pitching was done by Cusick, Potter and Caldwell, Potter twirling a no-hit game against Tusculum College. Captain Kilpatrick and Wills, center fielder, tied for the team batting average. Nine out of a squad of sixteen hit for .300 and over. A strong team is expected at the college next season.

Bethany (W. Va.) College.—The Bethany College team opened the season on its home grounds by defeating West Liberty Normal, 9 to 0. Then came the game with Carnegie Tech, which, on account of injuries to players, Bethany lost, 10 to 0. The game with University of Pittsburgh was lost under the same handicap. Outside of these two games the team played good, consistent ball, defeating such teams as Washington and Jefferson, Duquesne University, and West Virginia Wesleyan one game out of three. Rodgers at third base, along with Burgan behind the bat and Harris in the box, were the principal players of the season.

Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me.—The principal games played by the Bowdoin team in 1913 were those of the last half of the season, in the race for the championship of the league, which was composed of the four Maine colleges. This honor went to Bowdoin. The remarkable feature of the season was the work done by Coach Daniel Coogan. Though prospects were dim at the start, he developed, from the small amount of available material, a team which won the championship of the State. The main first string pitcher of the season was Leon Dodge. With good lasting qualities he did a great deal of excellent work. The highest batting average, .396, was held by Neal Tuttle, who did some fine playing in left field.

Boston College, Chestnut Hill, Mass.—In 1913, Boston College once more took up Base Ball after a lapse of several years. Tom Scanlon of Fordham was secured as coach, and Frank Murphy, '13, elected captain. The team was handicapped through lack of suitable grounds for practice, but nevertheless made a creditable showing. Captain Murphy, the Conley brothers, Linnehan and Barry were the individual stars, while the rest of the team backed up their efforts with steady determination, and though sometimes outclassed, the team never gave up as defeated. It was a remarkable aggregation, especially for its batting strength, the average being well up to .285. The principal games on Manager Burke's schedule were the Colby game, which was won by hard batting, and the Holy Cross game, which was lost after a brilliant pitchers' battle. A large following attended this game, which was featured by the hair-raising defense of Cawley of Holy Cross, and Bob Conley and Linnehan of Boston.

Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.—Dartmouth had a moderately successful season in 1913, winning a majority of the games and playing a thirteen inning game with Yale. London and Sullivan led the batting list, both hitting over .300. Morey pitched a good, consistent game, and Wanamaker's catching was a feature.

Buchtel College, Akron, Ohio.—Coach Frank Haggerty, an old Colby boy, has this to say about Buchtel's 1913 team: "From scant material one of the best teams in Ohio was developed. Sidnell did most of the pitching. His work in the Case, Reserve and Ohio State games was fine. These three games were the most important on the schedule. Buchtel lost to Case in an eleven-inning contest. Prospects for the 1914 team are bright, as but two men, Adams and Zimmerman, are missing."

The Citadel, Charleston, S. C.—Last year's team was composed mainly of raw material and the work of the team was fine, considering the handicap of having only one reliable pitcher, Gibson. The work of Folger in left field was a feature, while Martin at the bat was a star. James also showed up well behind the bat. The prospects for this year's team are very bright, with a great deal of promising material, including most of last year's team. Angus H. Macaulay is manager.

Clark University, Atlanta, Ga.—Clark made a remarkable improvement over 1912. Although but one game was won during the entire season, all were first-class exhibitions, as is shown by two tie games and the close scores in the others. Much credit is due to pitcher W. G. Black, who struck out 66 in seven games, and also to the wonderful hitting ability of Raymond Underwood. The Shaw-Clark game was the best by far of any played in Atlanta in 1913, the contest going thirteen innings to a 2—2 score, being called on account of darkness. The team ranks as one of the leading colored teams of the South.

Canisius High School, Buffalo, N. Y.—Canisius High School season of 1913 was one victory after another, the nine proving the champions of teams of their own size. They met mostly opponents bigger, older, heavier and stronger. Kelleher caught and hit like a would-be leaguer. O'Laughlin and Lewis, first base and pitcher, swapped positions effectively; Ratchen also twirled well, and twice won his own game. The infield, Setter, second base; Meyers, short-top, and Davis, third base, played good ball in the field and were strong at the bat. The outfield was held down by Shanahan, center field, who got to first more often than any other man on the team. Giannelli, left field, by his stick work broke up several games, and Hatch, right field, played a consistent game in the field. For a young team, playing their first high school ball, picked mostly from first and second year men, these youngsters played contests of which they may be justly proud. A triple play, retiring the side and winning the game, was the star play of the season.

Clemson College, South Carolina.—Clemson did not lose a game in 1913 and ranked with the first teams in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association. Ezell, captain of last year's team, was Heisman's pick for first place as pitcher on the All-Southern team. Out of eleven games pitched during the season he won nine. He also pitched a no hit game against Erskine College, only twenty-eight men facing him. Webb at first, Hutto at second, Cureton at shortstop, and Cole at third starred. Out of seventy-seven times at bat, Hutto struck out twice during the season. Manager E. H. Pressley forwards the following averages:

	Batting						Fielding
	G.	AB.	R.	H.	SB.	PC.	PO.	A.	E.	PC.
Cureton, shortstop	18	76	25	30	19	.395	34	38	12	.857

Clarkson College of Technology, Potsdam, N. Y.—All but two of the games with colleges in 1913 were canceled because of rain and a short season owing to commencement coming two weeks earlier than usual.

Connecticut Agricultural College, Storrs, Conn.—Lack of an experienced pitcher handicapped the team. F. Keating and L. Prouty were stars in their positions. The college is young in athletics, but is coming up every year. Merle R. Young is manager.

Gallaudet College, Washington, D. C.—Gallaudet showed up very well in the game against Georgetown, which won only after a struggle. Rasmussen pitched the majority of games. He is a big chap, with a long, powerful arm, and lots of speed. Captain Rendall, who caught, also deserves credit for the capable manner in which he worked his team. L. E. Johnson was the 1913 manager.

Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y.—Hamilton's team showed only average ability during the season of 1913, the hitting being below par and the fielding not much above the ordinary. The work of Captain Royce in the box was the feature, while the shortstop play of Rothensies was, in general, spectacular throughout the season. Catcher Miller had a batting average of .500. William R. White was manager.

Delaware College, Newark, Del.—Delaware's 1913 team was the best for several years. Although the fielding was rather loose, the strong batting more than made up. Hoch, captain and first baseman, and Huston were the stars on offensive work. Doherty at shortstop did the best work in fielding. Jolls was the mainstay in the box. The principal games were those with A. and M., Johns Hopkins and Bucknell.

Colby College, Waterville, Me.—The college team played fourteen games in 1913, winning five and losing nine. Although the team did not do as well as usual, still Harvard was one of the teams defeated, and Colby was second in the Maine championship series. James starred in the box for Colby, while Lowney did good work behind the bat. Leflenr, at third base, played a wonderful game during the championship series.

Hampden-Sidney (Va.) College.—As the scores show, the college made an excellent showing against all of its opponents in 1913. It was handicapped by having only one first-team pitcher, J. C. Moore, whose work in the box was excellent. Frey, behind the bat, played a consistent game, while the work of Saunders and Carrington in the infield and Bedinger in the outfield was of a superior class. Manager Fitzgerald has provided a fine schedule for this year.

Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y.—Considering the teams played—twenty-eight games—Colgate made a most creditable showing. The first game of the season was won from the Army by a 3—2 score. Lafayette, with its fast team, was also defeated in a sensational game, 3—1. Notre Dame won a hot contest, 3—0. An even break resulted with Syracuse. Johnson was by far the season's star. He has had several offers to go with some of the professional clubs, but declined until he graduates. Hammond, McLaughlin, Croker and Robinson played good ball.

Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa.—The team's success during season of 1913 was remarkable, considering that Coach Eddie Plank, the Athletics' old reliable warhorse, had to develop an almost entirely new team. Hoar, who was with the Atlantic City Tri-State team during the season of 1913, did most of the twirling. Rohendaugh also was consistent. Mahaffie, the catcher, is a wonder. He deserves a berth in a minor league. He pegs to second like a professional. Myers, the 1913 captain, played well at third base. Ikeler, the 1914 captain, did excellent work at second.

Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.—The Harvard team had one of its most successful seasons in 1913. It started with little material, and in the early part of the season was defeated by several small colleges. Before the finish, however, Harvard defeated Princeton and Yale, the latter having one of the best teams in years. The second game of the Yale series was considered the best on record. Yale was ahead up to the ninth inning, when Harvard tied the score. In the fourteenth inning Harvard won the game by Hardwick's home run hit, with a man on second. The principal players were: S. M. Felton, pitcher; D. J. P. Wingate, shortstop; S. P. Clark, second baseman and catcher, and H. R. Hardwick.

Huron (S. D.) College.—The season of 1913 opened late. Martin, catcher, was the star of the team. Griffith was very strong on third. "Zim" Manwaring was a good player on first.

Heidelberg University, Tiffin, Ohio.—The most important feature of Heidelberg's games in 1913 was the excellent pitching of Coy, seventeen years old, who showed wonderful speed and control. Knapp at third base showed sensational fielding, finishing the season without an error.

Knoxville (Tenn.) College.—Four lost and four won, breaking even with every team played, is the Knoxville record of 1913. The greatest games were played between Fisk University and Knoxville. The feature of the game was the base running of Kindle of Fisk and the star plays made by Bradley in left field and Simpson on second base for Knoxville.

Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y.—Hobart plays a nine-game schedule with colleges in the New York State Intercollegiate Athletic Union. Last year, with a new coach and only three veteran players, a new team had to be developed, so that the season was marred by many defeats. Manager Ellis states that the prospects for a winning season this spring are good.

Illinois College, Jacksonville, Ill.—The 1913 team was composed almost entirely of first year men. Six games won and seven lost was a good record under those conditions. Features of the season's play were: Jaccards, fast base running; Darragh's consistent work behind the bat; Stewart's spectacular fielding in center field, and the hard hitting of Apple and Widenham, who batted for averages of .363 and .500, respectively.

Leander College, Toledo, Iowa.—Prof. L. K. Riggs, manager of the team, writes: "The team was composed of veterans, five having played professional ball as permitted under the Iowa Conference. Offensively, the team hit hard in pinches and ran bases well. The work of Allen, as pitcher, stood out prominently. In his shutout of Grinnell he disposed of fifteen via the strike-out route. Ladd's catching was the subject of much favorable comment. Muirhead in center field and Ward at short were defensively good and reliable with the stick."

John B. Stetson University, De Land, Fla.—Manager Swank says: "Our team won the State championship of Florida. Raymond Lee, one of our pitchers, played on the Winston-Salem team, the pennant winner of the North Carolina League, and was drafted by Memphis, in the Southern Association. Ben Williard led all college batters in the State with an average of .462. He is a second baseman. "Red" Snedigar was close behind, with .448. Snedigar had a tryout with the Athletics after the college season was over. Our prospects for 1914 are good, and we expect again to be State champions."

Hillsdale (Mich.) College.—Hillsdale College is a member of the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association, which is composed of the smaller colleges of Michigan, namely, Adrian, Alma, Albion, Olivet, Kalamazoo and Hillsdale. In the annual championship series, which is played in June, Hillsdale won the intercollegiate championship by defeating Alma and Albion, who had, in turn, defeated the other teams in the series. The players: Jenkins, catcher; Bach, Rennie and Cater, pitchers; Carpenter, first base; Mitchell, second base; Rosegrant, third base; Sowdey, shortstop; Worden, Cater and Roberts, outfielders, and Whaley, substitute. George Upp, formerly with Columbus and the Cleveland Americans, coached the team part of the season. Jenkins, Mitchell, Cater and Roberts hit well above .300, the first named exceeding the .400 mark. Bach and Rennie were the leading pitchers.

Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.—Base Ball has been a recognized sport at Johns Hopkins for only three years. E. J. Pieper and Guss Sattler, the first manager, were organizers. Pieper was captain during the past three seasons. He will be succeeded this season by C. C. (Pete) Porter, who is playing third base. Pieper, however, is still with the team, and will be one of its pitchers. Prospects for the coming season are bright. Practice will begin about February 1, and the season's first game will be played March 21 with Rock Hill College. Hopkins closes its season with the St. John's College game, to be played at Homewood Field on May 16. Many of the Base Ball games are played in double-header form with track and field meets as the other attraction. Eddie Hooper of the York Tri-State team was coach of last year's nine. He will probably be selected to take charge of candidates again this year.

New Orleans (La.) University.—Manager Malacher predicts a good season for 1914. The team's work in 1913 was excellent, the schedule of five games being all wins. All of the games were pitched by Jesse Hernandez. His good work, with capable support and hard hitting, was the feature.

Lebanon Valley College, Annville, Pa.—Stickell featured with his pitching, while Spangler, T. Lyter, J. Lyter, Snavely and Larew excelled in batting. J. Lyter was captain. Important games were those with Delaware, Gettysburg, Susquehanna (won by Lebanon Valley), and Dickinson and Bucknell (lost by one-run margins). The outlook is brighter than ever, and the schedule will be a heavy one.

Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.—Considering the short time the college has been allowed to participate in intercollegiate Base Ball the record is very good. The team was composed mostly of youngsters and their creditable showing was due largely to the effective coaching of Harry Pearster, an ex-American Association pitcher. The players who showed unusual ability and featured in the principal games were "Plowboy" Ward, "Nat" Harris, "Nap" Cassilery and "Henrietta" Hathorn.

Maryville (Tenn.) College.—For the 1913 season Maryville put out a team of bona fide students, none of whom had ever played league ball and only four who had ever played college ball. The team developed very fast and proved one of the best college teams in the South. When the game with the New York Giants was over several of their men, and especially Tesreau, said it was the best all-student team they had ever seen. All of the 1913 men are back, so the Base Ball outlook is exceedingly bright. Maryville is not in Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association, but play by their rules.

Lombard College, Galesburg, Ill.—By closing a rather lengthy schedule of eighteen games, with a percentage of .500, Lombard College finished a very successful season. Victories over three of the "Little Five' Conference teams—Lake Forest, Knox and Monmouth—and a 3—0 victory over St. Viator's team show the class of Lombard's play. They played poorest against the weakest teams, losing several games to nines of inferior caliber. Trumpy carried the bulk of the pitching burdens, twirling in eleven of the eighteen games. Turner, .331; McKee, .310, and Wright, .304, were the leading batsmen.

Lincoln Memorial University, Harrogate, Tenn.—For the third year of organized athletics, the scores of 1913 make a fair showing. Heckman, Fowler and Bailey, after having played in every game of the season, finished with averages away up in the .300 class. L. M. U. plays only bona fide students and is eager and willing to meet any college with which games can be arranged. The roster of the team was as follows: Heckman, captain and catcher; Rowland, pitcher; Bailey, second; Whiteside, center; Purcifu1, left; Hendren, short; Lilly, manager and right; Clark, first, and Wilson, White, Robbins and McCall subs.

Lake Forest (Ill.) College.—Handicapped by bad weather conditions, Lake Forest got away to a poor start, losing to Northwestern University, 10—6. However, as the season progressed, under the hard work of Coach Kennedy the team improved greatly. The team split even with Armour, the "Little Five" champions; lost two close games to Beloit, and finished third in the "Little Five" Conference. A pleasing contest was the defeat of Notre Dame, one of the strongest college teams in the country. Much credit is due Kennedy for his hard and earnest work as coach, and as to the players, the work of Krueger pitching, Vost catching, Castagnier on first, and Mellick, Martin and Thomas at bat and on bases, stands out as most formidable.

Lehigh University, South Bethlehem, Pa.—Although the scores of the 1913 team do not show that the team played a very high class of ball, this was nevertheless a fact. The team ran into all sorts of hard luck, which is shown by the loss of seven games by one run and the playing of five extra-inning games. Spurts of wonderful playing both at the bat and in the field were shown, especially in the two Pennsylvania games, the Fordham game and the last Lafayette game. The outlook for 1914 is very promising. Only three men have been lost, so that together with last year's freshman team and new material in college the 1914 team bids fair to be the best in years. The leading 1913 players were Bill O'Keefe, Wright, Shellenberger, Pazzette and Chenowith. The latter, a green man, played shortstop, and was easily the star of the team.

Morris Brown College, Atlanta, Ga.—The season of 1913 was a successful one for this well known colored team. They won the city pennant and also the state championship.

Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa.—The season of 1913 began with a new lineup and young and inexperienced men. Late in the season they developed into a good, hustling team, as their scores show.

Mount Union College, Alliance, Ohio.—In spite of the fact that Mount Union started the season greatly handicapped by the loss of their battery, the team as a whole made a very creditable showing in 1913.

Northwestern College, Evanston, Ill.—Eight Conference games, winning three and losing five, was the 1913 record. Captain Young, first base; Seanalton, third base; Lamke, pitcher; Denton and Morrill, outfielders, were lost by graduation. Weather conditions caused cancellations of two Conference games.

Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio.— Owing to the failure to develop a good, consistent first string pitcher, Muskingum did not show up so well as in former years. The prospects for a good team this year are bright, as only one man was lost by graduation. Sinclair led the team in batting with an average of .321.

Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, Mich.—The team started out with wonderful prospects, but two star pitchers were put out with injuries, so that the season was one of mediocre success. The annual series with the University of Michigan are the ones of most interest. Dawson in left field and Griggs on first played high class ball, while Mogge led with the stick. The team batting average was .271 and fielding .946.

Missouri Valley College, Marshall, Mo.—The Marshall collegians were victorious in two games out of a series of three with the Warrensburg Normals, the champions of the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association, and barely escaped victory in the third game of the series, losing to the Normals by 9 to 8. Three members of the team, Kirkland, Holmes and Green, batted above .400 for the season. Eight men out of a club of fourteen were awarded their "M." Carl I. Duncan is manager for 1914.

Mount St. Mary's College, Emmittsburg, Md.—Manager Goldsborough reports: "The team's work was considered very good previous to the departure of Schick, the mainstay of the pitching staff. The principal games were Navy, Villanova, Gettysburg and Hawaii University. The leading players included Costello, Malloy, Sebold and Laughlin, the former two starring for three consecutive seasons. The Villanova game was the most closely contested. The "Mountaineers" won, as they have many similar contests from their friendly rivals in previous years. Mount St. Mary's secured fourteen hits off Peploski, the star pitcher of Seton Hall, while their opponents hit safely but seven times."

Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College.—Mississippi A. and M. won the state championship for the third consecutive year, and claimed the S. I. A. A. championship along with Georgia and Alabama, by virtue of her victories over five S. I. A. A. teams, including Vanderbilt, Tulane, Louisiana State University and Mississippi College. The team lost but one series of S. I. A. A. games, that to Alabama, which in turn lost to Georgia. But Georgia also lost to Georgia Tech, and that left the championship in a muddle. Critz, McGee, Baker, Kinney and Nobles were among the best players in the Association. Adams pitched consistent ball. All pitchers were freshmen. A. and M. had probably the best hitting team in the Association.

Milton (Wis.) College.—Pitcher G. H. Crandall was the captain in the 1913 season and the leading player. He pitched eight of the nine games, winning five, and struck out 102 men. In the first St. John's game he struck out 23, and the next day, at Carroll, struck out 17 more. An injury resulting from being hit with the ball kept him from winning that game. Pitcher Maxon pitched the game at Ripon and lost, 2—1. Crandall attempted to pitch the game at Northwestern when just recovering from an attack of la grippe, and as several other men of the team were also ill, the result was a bad defeat. Later Milton won from them, 6—3. The game with the University was one of the best, Crandall holding the 'varsity to three hits, at Madison. West led the batters with an average of .333. Bingham, Randolph and Crandall were also .300 hitters.

Ohio Northern University, Ada, Ohio.—The team's work during the season was very creditable, playing all games upon the home grounds, with the exception of the first game, that with Capitol University. The players that featured with the stick were Fairless, Malloy, Portz, Stump, Starry and Ross. The principal games were with the University of Pittsburgh, Washington and Jefferson, Michigan Agricultural College and Otterbein.

North Carolina Agricultural and Mechanical College, West Raleigh, N. C.—Although the college team won a large percentage of the games played during the season of 1913, the record was slightly below that made during the previous three seasons. The leading players were: A. A. Farmer, captain and center field; H. E. Winston, catcher, and M. L. Cottrell, left field. Besides fielding exceptionally well, these three players batted around the .400 mark.

Oberlin (Ohio) College.—The 1913 season was the best Oberlin has ever enjoyed in this branch of sport for at least five or six years past. No team in the State and no team representing the Ohio Conference had a better record, and it is doubtful if any other team made quite so good a showing, when the strength of the schedule is considered. The team was coached by Glenn C. Grey. C. W. Savage, whose work on the Foot Ball Rules Committee is prominent, is graduate manager.

New York University, New York City.—Four victories and eleven defeats shows that N. Y. U.'s season was not very successful, but in view of the fact that the schedule was very heavy for an insitution of its size, where the teams are drawn from only about three hundred and fifty students and that there were only three men left from the team of the preceding year, it is felt that the team did as well as could be expected. The work of Captain Lynch at shortstop, Ifau behind the bat and Partick in the outfield was conspicuous.

Ohio Wesleyan College, Delaware, Ohio.—Although rather successful in all of her Ohio games, winning seven out of eleven contests, Wesleyan's showing outside the State was rather poor. Denison's two defeats and the first contest against Ohio State were probably the best of the season. The work of Needham, Potts and Captain Hunter in the field deserves commendation, while Perry, Hyer, Littich and Harris were the most dependable hitters. Semans, by his work in the box, won a bid from a minor league.

Pennsylvania State College, State College, Pa.—Handicapped by the loss of the whole infield of last year's team, Penn State's irregular winning was only to be expected on the southern trip, which opened the season. However, with hard work in practice, a good team resulted, which succeeded in winning all but four games on the remainder of the schedule, taking the better side of the score from West Point, Lehigh, Seton Hall and University of Pittsburgh. Throughout the season the loss of Captain Whitney's good work on the mound was keenly felt, he having injured his shoulder in foot ball.

Northwestern College, Watertown, Wis.—Northwestern won seven of the eleven games played in 1913, and scored eighty-six runs to forty-one for opponents. A triple play in the game against Ripon College, on May 8, which Northwestern won, 10—1, was the fielding feature of the season. There was a runner on first and third bases, when a line drive was caught by Kehrberg, first baseman. He threw the ball across to third base, catching the man there, and returned it to first, catching the man who was running to second. Another feature was the pitching of William Lueckel. He struck out twenty men of the Watertown City League team on Decoration Day, and four days later fanned eighteen Milton College batsmen.

Occidental College, Los Angeles, Cal.—Occidental got away with a good start and kept up a winning streak until the middle of April, when the team slumped, due to the loss of Coach Wilke Clarke. Captain Seay was then given full charge and the team came back and defeated Redlands, Whittier and Pomona. The work of Captain Seay at second base and Kirkpatrick at shortstop were both very fast and formed the main strength of the infield. Crawford in left field was the best of the outfielders, he being very fast and a sure fielder. Walk did most of the pitching, Foster generally filling in in right field. It was only in the games he pitched that Warren played right field. The team's batting averages were: Blount, center field, .218; Kirkpatrick, shortstop, .322; Seay, captain and second base, .333; Crawford, left field, .263; Wieman, catcher, .263; Emmett, first base, .302; Foster, pitcher, .214; Warren, right field, .207; McClung, third base, .179; Walk, pitcher, .151.

Seton Hall College, South Orange, N. J.—The most notable victory for Seton Hall last year was the defeat of the Catholic University by a score of 6 –0, Peploski pitching. It was the first time in four years that they were ever blanked.

Roanoke College, Salem, Va.—Manager J. L. Borden writes: "Our team last year was composed of practically all new men, which accounts for our loss of nearly all the games. This year we have much better prospects and hope to make a better record."

Tulane University, New Orleans, La.—Under the management of G. W. Taylor, coached by B. I. Hayes, and captained by William Woodward, Tulane began with a trip through Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia, playing eight games, all of which were lost. Returning, five games were played, all but one being won. The pitching of Vanderveer and the batting of Taylor and Burns were the only characteristic features. Taylor led the batting with .315, followed by Burns with .305.

Olivet (Mich.) College.—Olivet lost but one game in the Michigan intercollegiate A.A., to Albion College, who had previously been defeated twice. The feature of the season's play was the no-hit-no-run game pitched by Fayette against Albion, 8—0. Captain Hamilton was re-elected to his position, the first time in the history of the institution of one man holding he captaincy two years in succession. One man, Smith, shortstop, was lost by graduation, and a strong aggregation is expected in 1914.

St. Joseph College, Rensselaer, Ind.—The team of this college was practically a new one, and as such its playing was very good. But when compared with the former teams that represented the institution the work was not up to the general average. However, so far as the battery positions are concerned, the team is now well fortified, as the season of 1913 has given the team several men who are still young and have all the necessary qualifications to develop into first-class college players. The prospects for 1914 are far better than they were last season.

Pomona College, Claremont, Cal.—The pitching of Elmer Becker and the batting and fielding of Harry Kingman, captain and first base, were two prominent features of Pomona's 1913 team. As a whole the team was an aggressive, hard hitting one, rather than strong in defensive fielding. During the mid-season a plague of mumps infested the players, putting Captain Kingman, a utility infielder, and the relief pitcher and outfielder out of the game for a month. Though they lost the Southern California championship to Occidental on a percentage basis, thus losing their 1912 honors, the team was one of Pomona's best aggregations.

St. Mary's (Ky.) College.—The pitching staff was the mainstay of the team, consisting of two of the best college pitchers in the State. One of these, Snyder, in the latter part of the season, pitched twelve games in the K.-I.-T. League, winning eleven, and at the close of the season was sold to Nashville of the Southern Association, while Kowalski on several occasions was sought by big league scouts, but refused to sign. Captain W. Madden played a star game on all occasions, both in the field and at bat; B. J. Madden also shows the makings of a good first baseman, and led the club in batting. The Western Kentucky State Normal School game was by far the best of the season, while those with Manual and Eastern Kentucky State Normal School were excellent contests.

St. Mary's (Kans.) College.—St. Mary's took a flying leap into the Base Ball season of 1913, by defeating the Kansas City Blues. At no time during the season was the Blue and White team beaten by more runs than five, and then only once by that score, with the exception of the hard hitting team from the University of Hawaii. Out of the twenty-three games scheduled, four were called off on account of rain, one was a tie, and six were donated to their opponents. One of these was drawn by Kansas University and two by the Kansas Aggies, with one to Oklahoma. The games of special interest were those played with Kansas University and with the Kansas Aggies. The first game with Kansas University was hotly fought, but finally went to the opposition. The last played with them was a victory for St. Mary's, 6 to 3. The stick was pretty liberally applied all during the season by St. Mary's, Stack, Collins and Kelly being pre-eminent. Stack won the trophy, winding up the season with an average of .350.

Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y. — During the season of 1913 Rensselaer had one of the best teams in years, losing only one game, that to Fordham University. The prominent players were Goodell, pitcher; McManus, shortstop, and Behan, left field.

Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.—The team of 1913 was rather a disappointment. Murray, shortstop, and L. Henrenx, captain and first baseman, were the most prominent players. The series with Wesleyan ended in a surprise, as the best Trinity could do was to win one game out of three.

University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.—Chicago won the Western Conference Base Ball championship of 1913 for the first time in twenty years. The feature game was that against Illinois, 2—1, twelve innings. Baumgartner, star pitcher of the team, batted .273. Norgren, Gaby, Mann, Catron and Des Jardien all hit over .300.

University of Colorado, Boulder, Colo.—Captain Bond, as catcher, played a consistent game throughout the year. Bailey, captain for 1914, was a star at second, and Griffin at short. Williams and Chamberlain did good work in the box. The team was composed mostly of green players, but under the tutorage of John Haley, a former University star, developed into a good nine.

Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.—On the whole the 1913 season could not be called successful, because of the erratic play of the team at times. This was especially evident in the Amherst, Harvard and Princeton games. The team, however, did show flashes of brilliant playing, as against Yale, when they broke Yale's winning streak of eighteen successive victories, and also in all of the last games played. The fielding honors go to Brown, shortstop, and Ainslie, second base; batting to Swain, who played third, and pitching to Hodge.

Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, College Station, Texas.—The team of 1913 was composed principally of raw material. Entire lack of pitchers at the beginning of season, but wonderful development marked the close. Miller, Skeeler and Crockett were the only available men for the mound and each lacked experience. Russell, catcher, exceptionally strong at the bat, while Collins (captain) and Wright, outfielders, were close seconds. Most perfect teamwork was shown in the 3—0 game with the Philadelphia Athletics, the 2—1 game with Austin College, and the 1—0 game with Baylor University.

Swarthmore (Pa.) College.—Three victories out of eleven games played was Swarthmore's record for the season of 1913. The first game with Pennsylvania, resulting in the success of the latter, 5—4, was one of the hardest fought of the season. Lehigh, one of Swarthmore's old rivals, was defeated, 10—9, in ten innings of spirited play. Newton Tarble pitched well throughout the season and was ably assisted by Twining. The playing of Captain Weaver, Durborow, Riffert and Thomas was a feature. With the new material on hand, Captain Durborow and Manager Bradfield are looking forward to 1914 as the best Base Ball season in the history of the game at Swarthmore.

Tuskegee (Ala.) Institute.—As in former years Tuskegee again carried off the premier honors among the southern colored schools, being accorded the championship, by critics, for the fourth consecutive season. Sloan, pitcher, is easily the best in the South, not having lost a game in four years. Watson, catcher; Howard, first base; Gilmore, center field, and Sullins, second base, are easily the peers in their respective positions among the southern schoolboys. Tuskegee was also fortunate in securing places on the All-Southern colored team for six members of her team. Although Howard and Watson are lost to the team through graduation, the team is confident of retaining first honors again this year.

Tufts College, Medford, Mass.—Tufts started out in 1913 in a manner indicating a successful season, winning five of its six games on the spring trip, but a slump followed, and with the loss of its coach on the first of May, the team won but four of the next eleven games. The batting of Captain Bennett, Lee and Angell, the fielding of freshman Stafford, the second baseman, and the work of Krepps in the box were the bright features of the season's play. On one or two occasions only did the team display its form at home, the best fielding and batting being done on the opponents' grounds. The team is, however, intact for the 1914 season, and with the incoming material to draw from, should, with proper coaching, develop into Tufts' best team in years.

William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va.—The college team of 1913 was of fairly good quality. Peocky and Tucker led at the bat, with averages of .325 and .375, respectively. The prospects for 1914 are very bright.

Union College, Schenectady, N. Y.—The work of the two freshmen pitchers—Hummer and Jenkins—in 1913 was excellent. Captain Hutchins in center field played excellently, and David Beaver as catcher used his head in all emergencies.

University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The 1913 team won the S. I. A. A. championship. The Mississippi A. and M. game that resulted in a 4—3 victory for Alabama was a twelve-inning affair. McDowell, the captain, played star ball during the entire season, and played in the Southern Association during the past summer. Joplin, this year's captain, will probably make the All Southern this season. Wells, the star catcher, will play his third year in 1914 and will make a strong bid for a place on the All-Southern. Coach Graves has been with the University for three years. V. Hugo Friedman is graduate manager of athletics.

Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn.—Although eight games were won and nine lost, the season of 1913 was by no means a failure. The team lost twice to Williams, but defeated Trinity twice in a three-game series. Columbia and Lafayette both met defeat, the former victory being due to the pitching of Stanley, who allowed only two hits. Gilman, behind the bat, played a steady game all season, and the work of Captain Wright at shortstop and Durling at first was good. Persons was the best of the outfielders. The averages of the three leading batters were: Bacon .423, Durling .375, Gilman .283. The three best fielders were: Stanley 1.000, Gilman .970, and Durling .967. The team hit for .241 and fielded for .911.

University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn.—Minnesota was very short of Base Ball material in 1913, due to strict enforcement of the "professionalism" rule, and there were only fifteen eligible men on the squad. Out of this small number Coach Danny Sullivan succeeded in developing a very good infield and one first-class battery. The outfield and substitute pitchers and catchers were very weak. Lambert, in the box, was the mainstay of the team, and was considered one of the very best pitchers in the Conference. When given any kind of support he generally won his game. Cooperman, behind the bat, Lawler at shortstop and McNally at first base also played very good ball throughout the whole season. The team's best achievement was defeating Chicago, the Conference champions, 7 to 3, at Chicago.

United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y.—The Army's season was particularly successful in 1913. Games were lost to Colgate, Penn State, Williams and Fordham, while such teams as Dartmouth, Harvard, Holy Cross, Virginia, Catholic University, Notre Dame and Annapolis were defeated. The Notre Dame and Annapolis games were especially hard fought. Neyland pitched excellent ball all season, being practically invulnerable near the end. Sadtler's fielding was of major league caliber. Lee, Sadtler, Merrillat and Hobbs were strong at bat. Hobbs was prevented from participating in many games because of a sprained ankle. The principal credit for the excellent showing must be given to Sammy Strang, the coach, formerly of the Giants, for out of a comparatively green team he made one which was able to hold its own with great credit against the best of our college nines.

University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich.—The 1913 season as a whole was a successful one, as the only series of games lost was that to the University of Pennsylvania. The loss of catcher Rogers, because of a broken leg in the first Syracuse game, and of pitcher Sissler, because of torn tendons in the first Cornell game, was a serious handicap throughout the remainder of the season. All but two of the 1913 team are in college this year, and in consequence the University of Michigan team bids fair to be a strong team the coming season of 1914. Following are the members of the 1913 team: Joseph J. Bell (captain), center field; Miller H. Pontius, first base; Perry A. Howard, first base; Edwin P. McQueen, second base; Ernest F. Hughitt, third base; Roy J. Baker, shortstop; John W. Corey, Jr., right field; Frank M. Sheehy, left field; Charles C. Weber and Russell E. Baer, utility and catcher after Rogers was out of game; Goodlaw H. Rogers, catcher; Donald Duncanson, substitute baseman; Roy H. Baribeau, pitcher; Cregar B. Quaintance, pitcher; George H. Sissler, pitcher.

University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.—Captain John Gordon twirled no-hit game against Chattanooga, 1—0, in the second game of the 1913 schedule.

University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo.—Missouri won nine, lost six and tied one in its 1913 schedule. All games with University of Kansas were later forfeited to Missouri because of the ineligibility of one of their players.

Tusculum College, Greenville, Tenn.—The team did fair work during the 1913 season, winning ten and losing seven, losing the series to only one team, Carson and Newman. The best game of the season was the second one with Maryville, which went thirteen innings and ended 5 to 4 in favor of Maryville.

University of Nevada, Reno, Nev.—Withdrawal from college and inclement weather were responsible for the poor showing in 1913, play being impossible in the early part of the season for a period of three weeks. Captain Grayson, Hamilton, Abbott and Baggs were among the leaders in fielding and batting.

Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa.—Eleven out of seventeen games played was the 1913 record. Kennedy, Mitterling and Mathieu excelled in the field, while the heavy hitting of Captain-elect Boyer, who had several home runs during the season, aided greatly in winning many of the games. Johnson and Weller both did excellent work in the box. Ursinus should have an exceptionally good team this season.

University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn.—Tennessee's representatives were entirely new men. They worked hard and made a very good record for all first year players. With the past year's experience Tennessee will have one of the best teams in that section in 1914. Captain-elect Smith batted .350 and will probably do even better in 1914. Dawson, who held "Vandy" to three hits and the slugging Georgians to six, will again be the mainstay of the twirling staff.

University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa.—Captain Imlay was the mainstay in the box, winning a majority of his games. Other leading players were Minds, center field, and Coryell, third base. The deciding game in a series of three with Yale took fourteen innings to decide, Yale winning. Pennsylvania won the series from Michigan, two games to one. Also the two each with Princeton and Columbia, and split even with Harvard. Cornell won their series, two games to one.

Villanova (Pa.) College.—The team played consistently throughout the entire season, both at bat and in field. Scarcity of good pitching material caused reverses in all but the Princeton game. Dougherty, first pitcher, proved himself equal to all and superior to many of the college men he met. Cosgrove, at first base, was leading batter, while O'Leary carried off the outfield honors. Captain Hogan was the main pillar of the infield. Lear at third, although a new man, gave promise of wonderful ability.

University of Texas, Austin, Texas.—Texas was the undisputed holder of the championship of the State of Texas and the Southwest. They played a total of thirty-one games, winning twenty-six, losing three and tieing two. Richard Bailey, the team's most dependable pitcher, spent the summer on the bench with the Philadelphia Athletics under Connie Mack. The stringent eligibility rules of the "Texas Intercollegiate Association" in regard to summer playing affected Texas very little last year, and the followers of the team are looking forward to an even stronger team in 1914. G. E. Mathews will be the manager.

University of Washington, Seattle, Wash.—In the early part of the 1913 season, Washington got away with bad start, by dropping three of the first four games played with the University of Oregon team, but in the latter part of the college season, when Captain Johnson's arm regained its old-time form, the team took a brace and won three games in succession from the Oregon Agricultural College team. The Japanese trip, which lasted from August 26 to October 24, was a thorough success in every way. Although Manager Horr was able to take only ten players on the trip, the team won eight of the twelve games played. Manager Horr says the Japanese college teams can compare favorably with almost any college team in the United States, in speed in the field, and on the bases. The leading batting averages for the season were: Patten .450, Welts .390, Fitzgerald .318, Graham .310. Pitcher Boatman signed a contract with Victoria, in the Northwestern League, for the season of 1914.

Whitman College, Walla Walla, Wash.—Whitman played eight intercollegiate games, of which two were won, five lost and one tied. The team was composed of underclassmen, only two men being over from 1912. Whitman expects to enter a strong team in the Northwest Conference this spring. Baker pitched good ball last year and Peringer and Blackman were leading hitters.

Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio.—This season was the best ever for Wittenberg in the quality of ball played as well as in the class of opponents met. Especial mention should be made of the work of pitcher Chester Miller, who worked in seven games, allowing but twenty-five hits and striking out 102 men, an average of sixteen per game. His best record was against Miami University, a twelve-inning game, where he shut them out and allowed but one hit.

Westminster College, Fulton, Mo.—The team as a whole worked together like a machine, but lacked experience. Westminster was fortunate in securing a game with the Chinese team from Hawaii. Although defeated by them, the contest was very even until the last inning. Captain Steele pitched great ball. Fabio Amezcaray, the big Cuban, won five games out of six that he pitched. Rootes and Fisher led the batting with .345 each. Westminster finished third in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association, which consists of eight colleges.

Wake Forest (N. C.) College.—Last year was one of the most successful in the history of the college, the team winning the undisputed championship of the State and defeating two of the strongest teams in the S. I. A. A. The most important game of the season was the annual Easter Monday clash in Raleigh with North Carolina A. and M. The 4 to 2 victory for Wake Forest was the first in nine seasons. The attendance at this game was over 3,500. Other important victories were three over Trinity, two from the University of North Carolina, Georgia Tech and Clemson. Out of a total of twenty-seven games, twenty-two were won, three lost and two tied. The batting average of the team for the season was .293. The most sensational work was done by Captain Billings at shortstop, who had 41 putouts and 71 assists in twenty-four games. The burden of the slab work fell upon Smith, who won twelve out of his thirteen games. Other players who performed consistently were Utley, first base; Lowe, catcher; Cuthrell, pitcher, and Woodall, outfielder.

Washington State College, Pullman, Wash.—Washington State is a member of the Pacific Northwest Intercollegiate Conference, comprising the University of Oregon, Oregon Agricultural College, Washington State University, Whitman College and Idaho University. Washington State won the "Inland Empire" championship from Idaho University and Whitman College. The Coast college championship against Oregon, Oregon Aggies and Washington University was a tie, each winning four and losing four games. The winners of the East Side ("Inland Empire") championship were to play the winners of the West Side, but on account of the tie on the Coast the games fell through. However, Washington State challenged all three teams from the Coast to play off for the Conference title, but to no avail. Washington State then laid claim to the Pacific Northwest intercollegiate championship on a percentage basis, having won a majority of their games. John R. Bendes, who is secretary of the Conference, has had championship teams for years, and is an authority on matters athletic in the Pacific Northwest.

Yankton (S. D.) College.—The Yankton College Base Ball team by winning all its games and twice shutting out Dakota Wesleyan, won the undisputed championship of South Dakota. Wesleyan must be given second place, as it won all its games except the ones with Yankton. The Yankton team as a whole showed up stronger in the fielding end of the game than in the batting end, as is evidenced by the fact that only two state schools were able to score. The crucial game of the season, with Dakota Wesleyan, went twelve innings and was hard fought throughout. It has been described as the "best exhibition of college Base Ball ever seen in South Dakota." The game with the School of Mines also was hard fought. Zolonosky was the mainstay in the box and was scored on in but one game. The trio of outfielders went through the season with but one error chalked up against them. McArthur led the team in hitting, with an average of .576. Zolonosky, Johnson and Urquhart followed in the order named. For the season of 1914 there are six "Y" men available, with an abundance of new material.

Locust Grove (Ga.) Institute.—Only one game was lost out of a full schedule, the team going well the entire season. Their record shows that Locust Grove was one of the best prep. school teams in the state of Georgia.

Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa.—The number of games and batting averages of the 1913 team were as follows: Hoch 11, .455; Diver 8, .346; Moose 13, .326; Steckel 16, .317; Rawley 16, .300; Price 16, .299; Potter 13, .275; Shaffer 4, .273; Goldstein 15, .235; Brenneman 10, .185; Nork 4, .167; Davis 10, .156; Panxtis 13, .086; Steinacher 5, .071; Sharp 2, .000.

Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy.—There were two distinguishing features in Mercersburg's season in 1913. During the early part the team lost a number of games because half of the players were conditioned in their studies. A boy is not eligible for an athletic team at Mercersburg unless he is free of condition. The second feature was the winning of the most important game, with Lawrenceville, 10—1.

Armour Institute of Technolcgy, Chicago, Ill.—Armour Institute of Technology claims the "Little Five" championship for 1913. Defeated the University of Chicago team, Western Conference champions, two games on their grounds. The first game went twelve innings, and was won in the twelfth by Joe Lindquist's home run. The 7 to 2 game with Beloit went eleven innings. In this contest Armour got five runs in the eleventh inning.

St. John's College, Annapolis, Md.—St. John's closed the season very successfully by winning 10 games and losing five. The team was strengthened materially by Heise, the former Balt more City College star, who played a sensational game. Probably the biggest surprise of the season was the defeat of St. John's old rival, the United States Naval Academy, 5—0. Wilson, the John's crack southpaw, pitched the best game of his college career, and never was in danger. Captain Noble also played good ball, and worked hard for the team.

Carroll College, Waukesha, Wis.—After a lapse of two years Base Ball was reinstated, and a most successful season was the result. Only a few games were played, but by defeating Ripon College, 5 to 1, Carroll is entitled to second place in the Wisconsin Association, first place going to Beloit. The entire Carroll team returned for 1914, and a state championship team should be the result. Glen Robinson, left fielder, hit .500 and fielded well. Risch pitched excellent ball. Captain Brung, at first, is a strong man. H. W. Lever of Ohio University will again coach the team.

University of Georgia, Athens, Ga.—Five men made the All-Southern, namely, Hutchins, catcher; Corley, pitcher; Covington, third base; Ginn, left field; McWhorter, center field. The most notable game was perhaps the one w th Michigan A. and M., in which Hitchcock of Georgia pitched a no-hit game, the weather being very cold. All of Georgia's rivals were easy picking until the end of the season, when Georgia Tech was met. The "break" seemed to be against Georgia in every single play that was made in these games. The team's strong point was batting. Six of the regular team batted over .300.

St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y.—The team was composed practically of new material. Clements and Gardner were developed as pitchers. The strength of the team lay in the infield. Captain Griffin at first, Calder at second, Veenker at short, and Lafferty at third played good, consistent games. Clements led in batting. Under Coach Reed's constant training the team gradually improved as the season progressed and won the big game of the schedule, with Norwich, 5 to 3, before an enthusiastic crowd of alumni. After the last game Koundy was unanimously elected captain to lead the 1914 team.

University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.—After winning the Conference Base Ball championship in 1912, naturally the Badgers expected to finish up well in 1913. There was no pitcher to take the place of Walter Grell, who pitched nearly all the games in 1912, and although the team itself was a better hitting and fielding aggregation, they failed to break even in their Conference games. At times the Badgers would play sterling games of ball, only to blow up in a crisis. Savage pitched fine ball for the most part, but was continually bothered with a sore arm. He did great work against Illinois in the game played at Camp Randall. Hoppert, at third base, did exceptionally good work, while the fielding and batting of outfielders Lampert and Herzog was as strong as that of any other Conference outfield men.

Horace Mann School, New York City.—The class of 1916 has won the inter-class championship now for two successive seasons. The team had an unbroken record of fifteen straight victories, defeating the Dorchesters twice, fifth, fourth, third and first years twice each, Riverdale, St. Francis Xavier and Cathedral Juniors. This is a remarkable showing for a schoolboy team whose ages average from thirteen to fifteen years. The team batting average was .388.

Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N. J.—The Base Ball season at Stevens was in many ways successful. Coach Saunders picked out a freshman squad and developed a team that should make a good record in 1914. Billoff, a freshman pitcher, has every indication of ability. Captain Lansdell played fine ball all season, his home run in the Rutgers game being a fitting close to his college career. A good schedule has been arranged for this season, and the victory side should hold its own. Eight of the 1913 team will be back.

Rock Hill College, Ellicott City, Md.—Although possessing fine material in 1913, Rock Hill did not have a successful season, due principally to the erratic work of the pitchers and the inexperienced young players. Corbett played a splendid game at third base, and was re-elected captain of this year's team. The outlook for 1914 is exceedingly bright, as Staly, Mueller, Beimel, Callahan, Meadows, Schonidiger and Doyle, members of last year's nine, will be on hand. Rain greatly interfered with the schedule, ten games being canceled on account of weather conditions.

Belmont (N. C.) College.—Although Belmont presented a practically new line-up on the diamond in 1913, the team made a splendid showing, and in spite of the fact that the schedule was shortened by cancellations and rain, the students and friends of the college were well pleased with the Base Ball programme. Eichenlaub, pitcher; Foley, infielder, and Burke and Browning in the outfield, were the stars of the team. In fourteen games played, the team scored 105 runs against 39 by opponents, made 139 hits against 68, and were charged with 34 errors against 63 by opponents. The material for 1914 is very promising.

Northwestern College, Naperville, Ill.—The season was characterized by the excellent work of the battery. Captain Kluckhohn did some sensational pitching, and E. A. Geister proved an exceptional catcher. Kluckhohn struck out twenty men in the Armour game. St. Viator games were exciting, as in both they were held scoreless until the ninth inning, and each time rallied with four runs, the score bein 5—4 in each game. Spitler, at short, was the best infield man, having only three errors for the season. Most of the men were inexperienced and weak at the bat. Hill, at second base, was a strong fielder, but poor batter. Griesemer was the most consistent outfielder.

Baker University, Baldwin, Kans.—Coach Scherer of last season, worked under the handicap of new material, and without many old men back, developed a fairly good team. Practically all the men are back for 1914, and with the addition of Zabel to the pitching staff, the Kansas Conference having made him eligible for collegiate athletics, Baker anticipates turning out one of the strongest teams in the history of the university. The stars of last season were: Anderson, catcher, who allowed only one man to steal a base; Hassler, recruit pitcher and center fielder, who was a sure catch, and made two of the three home runs; Captain Vernon, second baseman, and pitcher Liston.

University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa.—The season of 1913 was one of the best in years. Under a new coaching system, headed by "Mays" Edmundson, the nine was rapidly put into playing shape. The team started off with a rush, winning every game until it met Michigan, where, as the Detroit newspapers said, if Pitt had had the breaks, the result would have been different. Just before the Washington and Jefferson game the team suffered a great loss by the ruling out of Harenski, on account of being down in his studies. Earlier in the season he had pitched a no-hit game against Muskingum College, defeating them, 7 to 0. The W. and J. series resulted in a tie. Prospects for 1914 are very bright, as the team only lost one man by graduation. There is an abundance of new material in school. An attractive schedule has been arranged by Manager Grove, including games with Princeton, Lehigh, Lafayette, and other teams of high standing. The following men were awarded letters: Captain Allen, Baker, Giles, Gaw, McKeown, Schenck, McConaky, Dillon, F. Smith, Wilson, Riehl, Harenski and Manager Grove.

Phillips Andover Academy, Andover, Mass.—The season of 1913 was not as successful as previous years. The Exeter and Hotchkiss games were the principal contests. Swett pitched fine ball, while Early played a good game in left field.

Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va.—Washington and Lee's team played twenty-two games during the season of 1913, of which it won ten and lost twelve. Larrick led the pitchers with five victories and four defeats, Brewer followed with four victories and five defeats, while Meyers' record was one victory and two defeats.

Rose Polytechnic Institute, Terre Haute, Ind.—Eight won, four lost, and one tie, the latter an eleven-inning contest, 6—6, with Wabash, was the record for 1913. What probably gave the most pleasure was the 6—4 victory over Purdue, due to the excellent pitching of Arthur Nehf. The latter subsequently pitched for Kansas City of the American Association.

Payne University, Selma, Ala.—Payne's team was in good shape for awhile in 1913, but misfortunes overtook the nine subsequently. However, the Base Ball authorities are looking forward to a successful season in 1914. The principal players in 1913 were: Moore, catcher; Walker, left field; Mumford, second base; Blevins, first base; Thorps, right field, and Caldwell, shortstop.

Catholic University, Washington, D. C.—With a record of twenty-three games won and seven lost the Catholic University claims the South Atlantic championship. Pipp was the leading batsman. In the 3—2 Cornell game, won by the Washingtonians, Trayers did not allow a base hit. The team was made up as follows: McDonnell and Smith, catchers; Greene, Trayers and Ryan, pitchers; Pipp, first base; Zachary, second base; Hayes, shortstop; Horan, third base; Lynch, left field; Donnelly, center field; Maguire, right field; Bain, Frenis, Moran, Renyrose and Carter, utility.

Georgetown University, Washington, D. C.—Georgetown, during the season of 1913, had one of the most disastrous campaigns in its history. The men reporting were far below the average, and the pichers depended upon to do the bulk of the work fell down when facing a crisis. Davis at third base, playing his third year on the team, was easily the star, leading in batting and fielding. The prospects for 1914 are very bright. A schedule of thirty games, including a number of the larger colleges of the East and Middle West, is the best ever arranged at the university. Coogan, the coach, is well known, having for the six years he coached at Cornell turned out successful teams.

Hill School, Pottstown, Pa.—The following are the batting and fielding averages of the Hill team for the season of 1913:

	Bat. PC.	Field. PC.		Bat. PC.	Field. PC.
Markle, shortstop.....	.400	.757	E. Shepley, third base..	.263	.932

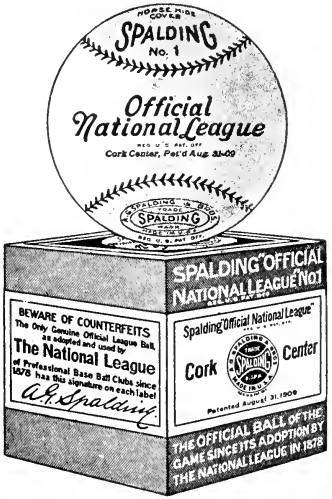
The Spalding "Official National League" Ball

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

PATENT CORK CENTER

PATENTED AUGUST 31, 1909



Adopted by The National League in 1878 and is the only ball used in Championship games since that time and, as made now with Patent Cork Center, has been adopted for twenty years more, making a total adoption of fifty-four years.

This ball has the SPALDING "PATENT" CORK CENTER, the same as used since August 1, 1910, without change in size of cork or construction. Same ball exactly as used in World Series Games of 1910, 1911, 1912 and 1913.

No. 1 { Each, - - $1.25 / Per Dozen, $15.00

Each ball wrapped in tinfoil, packed in a separate box, and sealed in accordance with the latest League regulations. Warranted to last a full game when used under ordinary conditions.

THE SPALDING "OFFICIAL NATIONAL LEAGUE" BALL HAS BEEN THE OFFICIAL BALL OF THE GAME SINCE 1878

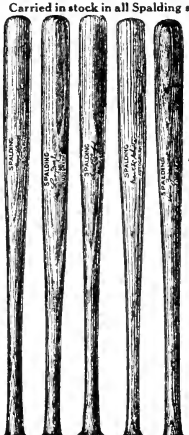
Spalding "Players' Autograph" Bats

No. 100. "Players' Autograph" Bats, bearing the signature of the player in each case, represent their playing bats in every detail. Made from the finest air dried second growth straight grained white ash, cut from upland timber, possessing greater resiliency, density, strength and driving qualities than that of any other wood. The special oil finish on these bats hardens with age and increases the resiliency and driving power of the bat. . . . . Each, $1.00

Carried in stock in all Spalding stores in the following Models. Mention name of player when ordering.



AUTOGRAPH MODEL Largest and heaviest bat (except Meyers special model) used by any professional ball player. Weights from 51 to 55 ounces. Length 35 in.

AUTOGRAPH MODEL Well balanced, comparatively light weight, with sufficient wood to give splendid driving power. Weights from 36 to 40 ounces. Length 34½ in.

AUTOGRAPH MODEL Very small handle, and balanced so that with a full swing, terrific driving power results. Weights from 37 to 41 ounces. Length 35 inches.

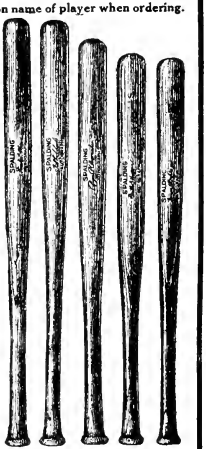
AUTOGRAPH MODEL Splendid model, comparatively small handle, well balanced. Weights from 40 to 44 oz. Length 35 in.

AUTOGRAPH MODEL Extra large heavy bat with thick handle. Weights from 44 to 48 ounces. Length 35 inches.

AUTOGRAPH MODEL Different model from that formerly used by Clarke, improved in balance, model and length. Weights from 39 to 43 ounces. Length 34½ inches.

AUTOGRAPH MODEL Short bat, large handle, well rounded end. Weights from 40 to 44 ounces. Length 32½ in.

AUTOGRAPH MODEL Short bat, small handle, but body quite thick. Weights from 38 to 42 ounces. Length 32 inches.



AUTOGRAPH MODEL The smallest, shortest and lightest bat used by any professional player. Specially adapted to small or light men. Weights from 35 to 39 ounces. Length 31 inches.

AUTOGRAPH MODEL One of the best all around models ever produced. Medium small handle and well distributed striking surface. Equally suitable for the full swing and for the choke style of batting. Weights from 40 to 45 ounces. Length 34 inches.

We can also supply on special orders Donlin, Oakes, Keeler and Evers Models.

SPECIAL MADE TO ORDER PLAYERS' MODEL BATS

We can supply on special orders Model Bats same as we have made for the most famous batsmen on National and American League Teams.

Spalding Brown Oil-Tempered Bats

No. 100D. These bats are tempered in hot oil and afterwards treated with a special process which darkens and hardens the surface and has exactly the same effect as aging from long service. The special treatment these bats are subjected to make them most desirable for players who keep two or three bats in use, as the oil gradually works in and the bats keep improving. Line of models has been very carefully selected. Timber used is the same as in our "Players' Autograph," "All Star," "Professional Oil Finish" and Gold Medal lines. . . . Each, $1.00

Furnished in any of the following twelve models—Mention model number when ordering

LENGTH	WEIGHT	LENGTH	WEIGHT	LENGTH	WEIGHT

Spalding Vaulting Poles

SPECIAL NOTE—It is our endeavor always to supply Athletic Equipment of the very highest quality, and which is at the same time made of the most satisfactory material and in the best possible manner for the purpose intended.

We have discontinued making Spruce Vaulting Poles because we find ourselves unable to recommend their use owing to danger of breakage and possibility of serious injury to user. Bamboo poles we do recommend, having proven to our satisfaction that they are superior for vaulting to poles made of any wood we know of, and, furthermore, if they do break while in use, the danger of personal injury is very remote.

Spalding Bamboo Vaulting Poles

INDOOR AND OUTDOOR STYLES

Owing to differences in climatic conditions it is impossible to keep Bamboo Vaulting Poles from cracking. These cracks or season checks do not appreciably detract from the merits of the poles, except where they are continuous. Much of the real strength of the pole is in the joints. All of our tests would seem to prove that poles with season checks may be accepted as safe and durable, except where the season check is wide open and extends through several sections on one side. Very frequently such splits or season checks can be entirely closed by placing the pole in a damp place for a day or so.

Mike Murphy "Rub-In" Athletic Liniment

THIS PREPARATION is the same as has been used by Mike Murphy, the famous athletic trainer, in conditioning the Yale, University of Pennsylvania and other college teams which have been under his charge. He is famous for the perfect condition in which he brings his athletes into a contest, and the ingredients and proper preparation of his "Rub-In" Liniment has been a closely guarded secret. He has finally turned the formula over to A. G. Spalding & Bros. with perfect confidence that the proper materials will always be used in preparing the liniment and that no considerations will induce us to cheapen it in any way.

SPALDING EXERCISING EQUIPMENT

For Recreation Rooms, Private Use and Small Athletic Clubs

BASE BALL TEAMS organized for the season only, disband usually until the following year unless something is done to keep the players together during the winter months. A moderate priced outfit of Spalding Exercising Apparatus installed in the club room provides the means for healthful recreation that insures a winning team on the base ball diamond next season.

Employers of office workers, banks and other mercantile establishments, find a Recreation Room fitted out with Spalding Exercising Equipment a most profitable investment. The room need not be very large, the size, of course, depending upon the number who are likely to use the room at the same time.

For the purpose of establishing a standard we would recommend a room 25 feet x 40 feet, with a minimum ceiling height of 16 feet. Recreative rooms can be maintained in smaller space, and excellent results can be obtained in rooms of 14 feet in height. Good air, with room for "group" games and medicine ball, boxing, etc., are desirable, however, and should be secured if possible.

No. H Recreation Room Outfit

Outfit No. H, referred to below, is suggested exclusively for recreation rooms, being suitable for use by those of varying ages, with sufficient equipment shown to supply as many as are likely to be using the room at the same time under ordinary circumstances, while additional equipment may be added as required to take care of a larger number without disarranging the balance of the outfit.

Consisting of:

1 No. 12 Chest Weight Machine.

Standard Policy

A Standard Quality must be inseparably linked to a Standard Policy.

Without a definite and Standard Mercantile Policy, it is impossible for a Manufacturer to long maintain a Standard Quality.

To market his goods through the jobber, a manufacturer must provide a profit for the jobber as well as for the retail dealer. To meet these conditions of Dual Profits, the manufacturer is obliged to set a proportionately high list price on his goods to the consumer.

To enable the glib salesman, when booking his orders, to figure out attractive profits to both the jobber and retailer, these high list prices are absolutely essential; but their real purpose will have been served when the manufacturer has secured his order from the jobber, and the jobber has secured his order from the retailer.

However, these deceptive high list prices are not fair to the consumer, who does not, and, in reality, is not ever expected to pay these fancy list prices.

When the season opens for the sale of such goods, with their misleading but alluring high list prices, the retailer begins to realize his responsibilities, and grapples with the situation as best he can, by offering "special discounts," which vary with local trade conditions.

Under this system of merchandising, the profits to both the manufacturer and the jobber are assured; but as there is no stability maintained in the prices to the consumer, the keen competition amongst the local dealers invariably leads to a demoralized cutting of prices by which the profits of the retailer are practically eliminated.

This demoralization always reacts on the manufacturer. The jobber insists on lower, and still lower, prices. The manufacturer, in his turn, meets this demand for the lowering of prices by the only way open to him, viz.: the cheapening and degrading of the quality of his product.

The foregoing conditions became so intolerable that 15 years ago, in 1899, A. G. Spalding & Bros. determined to rectify this demoralization in the Athletic Goods Trade, and inaugurated what has since become known as "The Spalding Policy."

The "Spalding Policy" eliminates the jobber entirely, so far as Spalding Goods are concerned, and the retail dealer secures the supply of Spalding Athletic Goods direct from the manufacturer by which the retail dealer is assured a fair, legitimate and certain profit on all Spalding Athletic Goods, and the consumer is assured a Standard Quality and is protected from imposition.

The "Spalding Policy" is decidedly for the interest and protection of the users of Athletic Goods, and acts in two ways:

First.—The user is assured of genuine Official Standard Athletic Goods.

Second.—As manufacturers, we can proceed with confidence in purchasing at the proper time, the very best raw materials required in the manufacture of our various goods, well ahead of their respective seasons, and this enables us to provide the necessary quantity and absolutely maintain the Spalding Standard of Quality.

All retail dealers handling Spalding Athletic Goods are requested to supply consumers at our regular printed catalogue prices—neither more nor less—the same prices that similar goods are sold for in our New York, Chicago and other stores.

All Spalding dealers, as well as users of Spalding Athletic Goods, are treated exactly alike, and no special rebates or discriminations are allowed to anyone.

This briefly, is the "Spalding Policy," which has already been in successful operation for the past 15 years, and will be indefinitely continued.

In other words, "The Spalding Policy" is a "square deal" for everybody.

A. G. SPALDING & BROS.

By A. G. Spalding

PRESIDENT.

Standard Quality

An article that is universally given the appellation "Standard" is thereby conceded to be the criterion, to which are compared all other things of a similar nature. For instance, the Gold Dollar of the United States is the Standard unit of currency, because it must legally contain a specific proportion of pure gold, and the fact of its being Genuine is guaranteed by the Government Stamp thereon. As a protection to the users of this currency against counterfeiting and other tricks, considerable money is expended in maintaining a Secret Service Bureau of Experts. Under the law, citizen manufacturers must depend to a great extent upon Trade-Marks and similar devices to protect themselves against counterfeit products — without the aid of "Government Detectives" or "Public Opinion" to assist them.

Consequently the "Consumer's Protection" against misrepresentation and "inferior quality" rests entirely upon the integrity and responsibility of the "Manufacturer."

A. G. Spalding & Bros. have, by their rigorous attention to "Quality," for thirty-eight years, caused their Trade-Mark to become known throughout the world as a Guarantee of Quality as dependable in their field as the U. S. Currency is in its field.

The necessity of upholding the Guarantee of the Spalding Trade-Mark and maintaining the Standard Quality of their Athletic Goods, is, therefore, as obvious as is the necessity of the Government in maintaining a Standard Currency.

Thus each consumer is not only insuring himself but also protecting other consumers when he assists a Reliable Manufacturer in upholding his Trade-Mark and all that it stands for. Therefore, we urge all users of our Athletic Goods to assist us in maintaining the Spalding Standard of Excellence, by insisting that our Trade-Mark be plainly stamped on all athletic goods which they buy, because without this precaution our best efforts towards maintaining Standard Quality and preventing fraudulent substitution will be ineffectual.

Manufacturers of Standard Articles invariably suffer the reputation of being high-priced, and this sentiment is fostered and emphasized by makers of "inferior goods," with whom low prices are the main consideration.

A manufacturer of recognized Standard Goods, with a reputation to uphold and a guarantee to protect must necessarily have higher prices than a manufacturer of cheap goods, whose idea of and basis of a claim for Standard Quality depends principally upon the eloquence of the salesman.

We know from experience that there is no quicksand more unstable than poverty in quality—and we avoid this quicksand by Standard Quality.
